How Was Jesus' Tomb Sealed?

Examining the tomb of Jesus in light of Second Temple-period Jerusalem tombs

“Early on the first day of the week, while it was still dark, Mary Magdalene came to the tomb and saw that the stone had been removed from the tomb.”—John 20:1, NRSV

What kind of stone sealed the tomb of Jesus? Was it a round (disk-shaped) stone or a square (cork-shaped) stone? While both kinds of blocking stones are attested in Jerusalem tombs from the time of Jesus, square (cork-shaped) stones are much, much more common than round (disk-shaped) ones.

In fact, of the more than 900 Second Temple-period burial caves around Jerusalem examined by archaeologist Amos Kloner, only four have been discovered with disk-shaped blocking stones. These four elegant Jerusalem tombs belonged to the wealthiest—even royal—families, such as the tomb of Queen Helena of Adiabene.

Was the tomb of Jesus among the “top four” Jerusalem tombs from the Second Temple period?

Since disk-shaped blocking stones were so rare and since Jesus' tomb was built for an ordinary person—because it was actually the borrowed, but unused, tomb of Joseph of Arimathea (Matthew 27:60)—it seems highly unlikely that it would have been outfitted with a disk-shaped blocking stone.

Archaeology therefore suggests that the tomb of Jesus would have had a cork-shaped blocking stone. Is this confirmed or contested by the Biblical text? How was Jesus' tomb sealed according to the New Testament?

In his Biblical Views column “A

How was Jesus' tomb sealed? While some Jerusalem tombs from the late Second Temple period boasted round (disk-shaped) rolling stones, it was more common to seal tombs with cork-shaped stones, such as the one pictured here. The archaeological evidence suggests that the tomb of Jesus—the unused tomb of Joseph of Arimathea—would have been sealed with a cork-shaped stone.

Rolling Stone That Was Hard to Roll” from the March/April 2015 issue of BAR, Urban C. von Wahlde looks at the Gospel accounts to see how the stone that sealed the tomb of Jesus is portrayed. His careful analysis of the Greek grammar reveals a detail from the Gospel of John that supports the idea that the tomb of Jesus was indeed sealed with a cork-shaped stone.

In his BAR column, Urban C. von Wahlde explains that the Synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark and Luke) all use a form of the Greek verb kulio to describe how the stone sealing Jesus’ tomb was moved. Kulio means “to roll.”

Mark 15:46 reads, “Then Joseph bought a linen cloth, and taking down the body, wrapped it in the linen cloth, and laid it in a tomb that had been hewn out of the rock. He then rolled a stone against the door of the tomb” (NRSV). The Greek verb used in the last sentence of this passage is proskulisas. Von Wahlde says, “This is a combination of pros (meaning ‘toward’) and the past participle of kulio (meaning ‘to roll or roll along’).”

Mark 16:3 describes the scene on Easter Sunday when Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Salome visit Jesus’ tomb: “They had been saying to one another, ‘Who will roll away the stone for us from the entrance to the tomb?’” The Greek word for “roll away” is apekulisen, which von Wahlde explains is “a combination of ap’ (meaning ‘away’) and yes, kulio (meaning ‘to roll’).”

The Gospels of Matthew and Luke use similar compounds of the verb kulio. Thus, all of these accounts imply that the stone sealing Jesus’ tomb was rolled.

Can square (cork-shaped) blocking stones be rolled?

In his article “Did a Rolling Stone Close Jesus’ Tomb?” from the September/October 1999 issue of BAR, Amos Kloner added “dislodge” or “move” to the definition of the Greek verb kulio. A square (cork-shaped) blocking stone might more readily be described as being “dislodged” or “moved” than “rolled.” Thus, this definition resolves any incongruity between the Biblical text and the archaeological record. However, von Wahlde disagrees with Kloner’s definition:

Measuring 4.5-feet tall, the disk-shaped stone at the so-called Tomb of Herod’s Family could be rolled to cover the entryway of the tomb or rolled back into a niche to open it, thereby permitting new burials to be added to the family tomb. This is one of four Second Temple-period Jerusalem tombs with a round rolling stone. Photo: Hershel Shanks.

In his article on the type of tomb closure used for the tomb of Jesus, Amos Kloner states that the Greek verb kulio means “to roll,” but it can also mean “dislodge” or “move.” I would disagree with this for two reasons: First, I at least cannot find any dictionary articles (including the largest, the Liddle-Scott-Jones) that give this other meaning. Second, as I pointed out above, almost all instances of the verb in the gospel texts are compounds of kulio, either pros-kulio (“roll up to”) or apo-kulio (“to roll away”). These are verbs of motion “toward” or “away from.”

In his article on the type of tomb closure used for the tomb of Jesus, Amos Kloner states that the Greek verb kulio means “to roll,” but it can also mean “dislodge” or “move.” I would disagree with this for two reasons: First, I at least cannot find any dictionary articles (including the largest, the Liddle-Scott-Jones) that give this other meaning. Second, as I pointed out above, almost all instances of the verb in the gospel texts are compounds of kulio, either pros-kulio (“roll up to”) or apokulio (“to roll away”). These are verbs of motion “toward” or “away from.”

It is not necessary to change the definition of kulio to make sense of the Gospel accounts. Von Wahlde points out: “It may very well be that people rolled the ‘cork-shaped’ stones away from the tomb. Once you see the size of a ‘stopper’ stone, it is easy to see that, however one gets the stone out of the doorway, chances are you are going to roll it the rest of the way.” Although they certainly would not have rolled as easily as round (disk-shaped) stones, cork-shaped stones still could have been rolled.

The Gospel of John presents a slightly different picture than the other Gospel accounts—with a different Greek verb used to describe the stone sealing Jesus’ tomb. John 20:1 reads, “Early on the first day of the week, while it was still dark, Mary Magdalene came to the tomb and saw that the stone had been removed from the tomb.”

The Greek word for “removed” or “taken away” is hairō, which Von Wahlde defines as “take away.” There is no mention of “rolling” the stone in the Gospel of John. Von Wahlde maintains that this description reflects “the Jewish burial practice much more accurately than any of the other gospels. He [John] has given us a detail none of the other gospels have.”

Thus, both the Gospel of John and archaeology support the interpretation that the tomb of Jesus would have been sealed with a cork-shaped blocking stone. For Urban C. von Wahlde’s full analysis of the type of stone that sealed Jesus’ tomb according to the Gospels, read his Biblical Views column “A Rolling Stone That Was Hard to Roll” in the March/April 2015 issue of BAR.

Later, during the late Roman and Byzantine periods, round (disk-shaped) blocking stones became less rare. Dozens of Jerusalem tombs dating to these periods have been found with disk-shaped stones—but on a smaller scale. Whereas the four disk-shaped blocking stones from the Second Temple period were at least 4 feet in diameter, the ones from later periods usually had a diameter of about 3 feet. The date and style of these tombs, however, disqualifies them as candidates for Jesus’ tomb since the tomb of Jesus belonged to an earlier period—the Second Temple period, which ended in 70 A.D. with the Roman destruction of Jerusalem. ## Every One His Witness

Third Article Witnessing

“I believe that I cannot by my own reason or strength believe in Jesus Christ, my Lord, or come to Him; but the Holy Spirit has called me by the Gospel, enlightened me with His gifts, sanctified and kept me in the true faith.” (The Apostle’s Creed, Third Article)

We confess in the Third Article that we, on our own, unable to believe in Jesus. We know that the Holy Spirit has worked faith in us by calling us by the gospel. Third Article witnessing recognizes that what we couldn’t do for ourselves, we can’t do for other people. We can’t use our reason or strength or any other First Article gifts to convince a person to believe in Jesus. It is wholly the work of the Holy Spirit to call, enlighten, and sanctify people. But it also recognizes that we do have a roll in His work. That is to bring the Means of Grace to people knowing that the Holy Spirit works through them to do His work of calling, sanctification, and so on. But we also bring people to the Means of Grace where they are given by Christ through the altar and the pulpit of a local congregation. “Through the Word and Sacraments, as through instruments, the Holy Spirit is given.” {John 20:22} Our role as witnesses is important as the Holy Spirit brings people to faith! # EVANGELISM

(Jesus said) "And when they bring you to trial and deliver you over, do not be anxious beforehand what you are to say, but say whatever is given you in that hour, for it is not you who speak, but the Holy Spirit." Mark 13:11

Dr. Charles McVety has a Christian television show in Canada ... some of the time. It seems McVety has had a run in with the Canadian Broadcast Standards Council. That's the group which makes sure broadcasters don't say bad or offensive things. Apparently, McVety's comments about homosexuality fit into that category. As a result, his program was removed from the air and let back on after he was warned his shows would be screened before broadcast. McVety's last three shows haven't been aired. On one program he talked about an upcoming debate with an atheist author. McVety was told he couldn't call her an "atheist pastor." When McVety told his audience his free speech was under attack, that program was pulled because he wasn't allowed to use the word "attack." McVety says he's no longer sure what is allowed and what is not. Either way, he's upset he is not allowed to openly criticize sin, while many other shows get away with criticizing the Savior. He said, "You can turn the television station on and you will hear my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ cursed on a regular basis -- and (they) don't censor anything like that." In all honesty, I have never heard Dr. McVety, so I can't comment on his show. On the other hand, I do know there are many places where, in the name of political correctness, a Christian can't label sin as being sin. You can call sin many things ... but you can't condemn it as wrong. It's highly unlikely things will, in the foreseeable future, get any better. This is why it's time for Christians to take a stand. When I say, take a stand, I'm not encouraging anyone to be obnoxious or get in somebody's face. I'm saying we should -- no matter what the world may want -- keep on doing that which God's grateful people have always done. Without fear or apology we need to keep bearing witness to the Savior who has done all which is necessary to save us from sin, the devil and death. The world won't like it and they may tell us to hush, but our Savior expects us to take a stand for Him.

Saying Grace

This is a story of a visiting pastor who attended a men's breakfast in the middle of a rural farming area of the country.

The group had asked an older farmer, decked out in bib overalls, to say grace for the morning breakfast.

"Lord, I hate buttermilk", the farmer began. The visiting pastor opened one eye to glance at the farmer and wonder where this was going. The farmer loudly proclaimed, "Lord, I hate lard." Now the pastor was growing concerned. Without missing a beat, the farmer continued, "And Lord, you know I don't much care for raw white flour".

The pastor once again opened an eye to glance around the room and saw that he wasn't the only one to feel uncomfortable. Then the farmer added, "But Lord, when you mix them all together and bake them, I do love warm fresh biscuits. So Lord, when things come up that we don't like, when life gets hard, when we don't understand what you're saying to us, help us to just relax and wait until you are done mixing. It will probably be even better than biscuits. Amen."

Within that prayer there is great wisdom for all when it comes to complicated situations like we are experiencing in the world today. Stay strong, my friends, because our LORD is mixing several things that we don't really care for, but something even better is going to come when HE is done with it. AMEN!

Opportunities for Service

Why do we want to make the house of God and our worship of God as reverent and beautiful as possible? Such a desire is of God and for God. He is present in our churches. Through His Word and sacraments, Christ comes to us as we are gathered together in His name. He speaks to us, and we speak to Him. He gives to us, and we give to Him. God is present.

As women make their homes as beautiful as possible for their loved ones, so we, loving God above all things, want to make His house and our worship of Him even more beautiful than our private homes. Whatever we do in humble and adoring faith to achieve this end is a distinct service of love.

Answering Objections to the Faith

(The Problem of Evil)

from The Reason I Believe by Allen Quist

This objection poses the question: “If God is gracious and loving, why is there evil? This is a question that has plagued mankind since the beginning of time. Countless books and essays have been written about it by some of the best thinkers the world has known. Does the existence of evil disprove the existence of God? There are those who think so, usually stating their argument as follows:

1. If God is good, He would want to eliminate evil.
2. If God is almighty, He would be able to do so.
3. Evil exists.
4. Therefore, God is not good, or He is not almighty, or He doesn't exist.

Before dealing with the problem of evil disproving God, let's see how atheists explain the existence of evil. Many say that evil doesn't really exist. That is what they must say in order to conform to their view. Evil to them is nothing more than a personal preference and is nothing more than nature plus nothing. It's a world of matter and energy with no purpose, no good, no evil, nothing but indifference. But no one can live this way. Atheists often decry violence, and say that religion promotes it. But

DO NOT imitate what is evil
but what is good.
3 JOHN 1:11, NIV

on what grounds can they do so? C. S. Lewis believed the existence of evil disproved the existence of God until he realized that he was appealing to a higher moral standard that couldn't be real without someone to give that moral standard. One of the foremost authority on the subject today is Christian philosopher Alvin Plantinga who states that the assumption that an almighty God can do anything is a mistaken one. He says that an almighty God can't create “logical contradictions.” For example, God can't He gets sick, cease to exist, or create free beings who can choose to do as they please AND what God wants them to do at the same time? God can do only that which is in His nature. God cannot lie and be evil since God is truth and good. He can't be good and evil at the same time. So, it may be that when God created persons – who are free – what happened in the world was up to them. A world with people free to make their own decisions and no possibility of evil would be a logical contradiction which would be against God's nature. It would not be a world that could be created. Another problem for the atheist is that while their materialistic view denies the existence of evil, they also use the existence of evil to deny the existence of God. But you can't have it both ways. And that's a philosophical take on the subject of evil.

Next month we will take a look at how the Scriptures explain evil. Russell Schutz, Evangelism Chair

Stewardship News

Living Sacrifices

Stewardship is not just about giving money to the church. It includes this, to be sure, but it is not limited to it. Stewardship involves our whole life – everything we have and everything we are.

Let us not, though, fall into the trap of thinking that because we give of ourselves in one area then we can neglect giving in another. Stewardship is not stealing from Peter to pay Paul. It is not a game that we play whereby we justify ourselves in not giving a tenth of our income because we have given in some other way.

This is why our Lord warns: “Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you tithe mint and dill and cumin and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faithfulness. These you ought to have done, without neglecting the others.” (Matthew 23:23) We are given to do both – tithe of ourselves and what we have.

And so it is that St. Paul makes his appeal to us: “I appeal to you therefore, brothers, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, which is your spiritual worship. Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that by testing you may discern what is the will of God, what is good and acceptable and perfect.” (Romans 12:1–2)

We are to present our bodies as a living sacrifice to God. We are not to have the mind of the world, where we exchange equal weight of this for an equal weight of that and think that we have done what God has required. Our whole life is given over for service in and for the Church of God. This is to be done in thanksgiving for what God in Christ has accomplished for us. This is our spiritual worship, the reasonable response to what He has done for us. Not one for the other but all in all.

But what does this look like? St. Paul never lays down a general principle without also giving us some practical application of what shape that principle is to take concretely. He gives the general principle that our bodies are to be living sacrifices to God. And, after admonishing those who have been given particular gifts of grace to serve the church, St. Paul then speaks generally of what is expected of all. He says:

“Let love be genuine. Abhor what is evil; hold fast to what is good. Love one another with brotherly affection. Outdo one another in showing honor. Do not be slothful in zeal, be fervent in spirit, serve the Lord. Rejoice in hope, be patient in tribulation, be constant in prayer. Contribute to the needs of the saints and seek to show hospitality.” (Romans 12:9–13)

This is what it looks like to present your bodies as living sacrifices. This is how we live out the grace of God here in time.

Let us then heed the apostle’s teaching. Let us present our bodies – everything that we have and everything that we are – as living sacrifices to God, our reasonable response to what God in Christ Jesus accomplished for us by His death and resurrection. Through this, we have forgiveness of sins, a new life in Christ, and eternal salvation. And through this worship, the grace of God is made manifest in His saints – for the church and the world.
