Americans may view the recent exodus of caravans from their respective Central American countries of El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala as a recurring problem with immigration concerns as Latin Americans line up at our southern border, however the problems of Mexico, Central America and South America will never be solved until governments can control their own appetite for corruption, drugs and control of national industries for their own personal gain. Corruption in government at the highest levels must be challenged by the people Latin America and the U.S.

Mexico topped the list in the rise of homicides related to uncontrolled drug wars. Homicides in Mexico broke their own previous records in 2018 witnessed a 15% rise which accounted for 15,973 killings in the first half of 2018 and finished the year with 33,341 homicides total. Ask any Mexican national who recently travelled to Mexico or has established residency in the United States as to why they emigrated and you will hear first hand testimony attesting to the outrageous rise in crimes in their native country. I asked several of my customers in my family grocery store and the responses were similar. “I had a small business in Mexico and the gang would come for their protection fees, then the government would come for their fees, I couldn’t stay in business,” said Juan Cortina, age 48 and he is not alone. Jesús Gonzalez, 22, of Zacatecas said he feared for his life and that of his younger siblings as they too were targeted by gangs in their neighborhood. Ángelo Cardenas told me “I wouldn’t recommend traveling in some parts of Mexico.” However, we should not over generalize, not every state in Mexico experienced an increase in crime. Mexico City and 32 other states in Mexico did not experience increases from 2017 but the statistics for last year were high also.

The largest drug cartels in Mexico — the Zetas and Sinaloa cartels — control most illegal drug trades from South America to the U.S. Usually, cocaine is imported from South America then smuggled to the U.S. Some groups also traffic marijuana and methamphetamine. Cartels are also involved with extorting local businesses, kidnapping for ransom, prostitution rings, intimidation and murder.

Mexico and the balance of Latin America have long lived in the shadows of the United States providing a low paying labor resource pool for the U.S. to continue an exploitive relationship with as U.S. corporations who have located businesses there to increase profits. Few Mexicans have benefitted from NAFTA. For example, U.S. auto plants in Mexico paid Mexican workers between $4 to $8 per hour compared to $28 to $38 dollars per hour for U.S. workers. Most trade agreements favorable to the United States have driven investment in Mexico and Latin America but not enough to raise their GDP or upgrade living conditions for a large number of Mexicans. The average GDP for Mexico and Latin America is between 4-6% respectively and due to their slow recovery from a global recession, there is little promise for improving the lot of most of these countries. The net result is people are driven to leave for better opportunities northward. Also, the promise for jobs in the U.S. continue to be good, ever for undocumented workers.

Immigration to the United States is driven by extreme poverty, government corruption, instability, uncontrolled crime and predatory behavior by cartels on the citizenry. Surviving rape, robbery, murder and general increases in gang violence through leaving the country and seeking asylum elsewhere is an understandable behavior. El Salvador, Colombia, Brazil, Venezuela crime rates notably are higher than most other countries in the Latin American umbrella of nations as disruptions in government and crackdowns have impacted these statistics. Nearly 40-60 per every 100,000 inhabitants experiencing death or violent crime is a scary condition and Latin Americans face this daily. Government wars on drugs also create “collateral damage” sometimes claiming innocent lives.

The U.S. through President Trump has sought to reduce aid to Mexico and Latin America promised by the Obama administration unless the countries can prevent their citizens from trying to leave the country. The $750 million in funds under Obama were titled the Alliance for Prosperity destined for El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras but is hardly expected to put a dent in the problem. We should advance a bilateral plan with Mexico and international plan with other Latin American nations to open markets for investment and increase trade to develop opportunities for both American investors and economic improvements of our neighbors south of the Rio Grande. We should exploit the natural resources of Latin America including purchasing minerals, gas, oil and human labor at a fair price enabling the economies of our neighbors to flourish. This will cut down on immigration to the U.S. over time. We do not always need to “low ball” our neighbors on price keeping them poor while our government and corporations prosper beyond imaginable levels of wealth.

Los estadounidenses pueden ver el reciente éxodo de caravanas desde sus respectivos países centroamericanos de El Salvador, Honduras y Guatemala como un problema recurrente con las preocupaciones de inmigración, ya que los latinoamericanos se alinean en nuestra frontera sur. Sin embargo, los problemas de México, América Central y América del Sur nunca se resolvieron hasta que los gobiernos puedan controlar su propio apetito por la corrupción, las drogas y el control de las industrias nacionales para su propio beneficio personal. La corrupción en el gobierno en los niveles más altos debe ser desafiada por los pueblos de América Latina y los EE. UU.

México encabezó la lista en el aumento de homicidios relacionados con guerras de drogas no controladas. Los homicidios en México rompieron sus propios récords previos en 2018, lo que representó un aumento del 15%, lo que representó un total de 15,973 asesinatos en el primer semestre del año. México comenzó el año con un total de 33,341 homicidios. Pregunte a cualquier ciudadano mexicano que haya viajado recientemente a México o haya establecido su residencia en los Estados Unidos por qué emigró, y escuchará testimonios de primera mano que atestiguan el aumento escandaloso de delitos en su país natal. Les pregunté a varios de mis clientes en el supermercado de mi familia y las respuestas fueron similares. “Tenía un pequeño negocio en México y las pandillas vendrían por sus tarifas de protección, luego el gobierno vendría por sus tarifas, no podría seguir en el negocio”, dijo Juan Cortina, de 48 años, y no está solo. Jesús González, de 22 años y residente de Zacatecas, dijo que temía por su vida y la de sus hermanos menores, ya que ellos también fueron atacados por pandillas en su vecindario. Ángelo Cardenas me dijo: “No recomendaría viajar a algunas partes de México”. Sin embargo, no debemos generalizar, no todos los estados de México experimentaron un aumento en el crimen. La Ciudad de México y otros 32 estados de México no experimentaron aumentos con respecto a 2017, pero las estadísticas del año pasado también fueron altas.

Los cártels más grandes de la droga en México, los cártels de los Zetas y Sinaloa, controlan la mayoría de los intercambios ilegales de drogas desde Sudamérica hasta los Estados Unidos. Por lo general, la cocaína se importa de Sudamérica y luego se pasa de contrabando a los EE. UU. Algunos grupos también trafican marihuana y metanfetaminas. Los cártels también participan en la extorsión de empresas locales, el secuestro de rescatistas, las redes de prostitución, la intimidación y el asesinato.

Meet Nick Guerra

Comedian Nick Guerra says that the main job of a comedian is to make people laugh. Well, apparently he is pretty good at his job.

Nick Guerra is coming back to Laughfest this year and I can’t wait. He first appeared with Cristela Alonzo in 2015. He feels honored that they are bringing him back, especially considering what the festival promotes and the love it has for comedians. “I was at a bar gig telling jokes to maybe eight people and then this email comes in asking if I want to be part of Laughfest. Being invited to this festival is a big, big, big deal! It’s amazing that there are people out there that believe in me and that’s all I need right now.”

Gone is the long hair, but he still has his boyish good looks and that infectious laugh. “It was time to grow up. The long hair was a financial choice. As a starving artist, getting a haircut was an unnecessary expense. As I began to get more corporate work and working all ages shows, I felt I should start looking more professional.” As for his laugh, it wasn’t until he started doing standup that people pointed it out to him. “A lot of people think I’m laughing at my own jokes, but I’m just in the moment, laughing at the situation of being an adult in a room full of adults that all agreed to have a silly, fun night.”

Growing up in McAllen, Texas, he didn’t always know he wanted to be a comedian. “I just happened to try it out and loved it. From that point on, I wanted to pursue it. I just told myself one day that I had already put years into jobs that didn’t work, might as well put years into comedy and hope it shakes out well.”

Nick’s star is definitely on the rise. He’s been on Last Comic Standing, The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon and Gabriel Iglesias’ Stand Up Revolution. Cheech Marin and Keenan Ivory Wayans have had good things to say about him. So what could be next for Nick?

“I have interest in every corner of entertainment, but two things have to come into play for those. I have to be given the chance in those arenas and I have to be prepared for the job. Yes, I would love to act but you can’t get every role, you only get the roles right for you. So when Hollywood finally writes a Latino character that is pale, loves hip hop, has a college-educated mom and dad, doesn’t necessarily speak Spanish and has a typical American life, then I would be PERFECT!”

Being a Latino in comedy certainly has had its obstacles. “I think there needs to be more understanding in the industry that, just because a comedian is Latino doesn’t necessarily mean only Latinos will understand the jokes. That’s the biggest hurdle to get over. I’m third generation American. My humor is based on what I’ve absorbed and learned growing up in Texas and watching the same American television and listening to the same American music everyone else did. I am America, so you know who will get my jokes the most? Americans. And that’s what I hope the people in charge finally understand. Funny is funny.”

Nick Guerra has a few words of advice for young people who are pursuing their dreams. “Nothing is certain in this world, so make the best of it. Don’t sit around waiting for approval from everyone in your life. As long as you are doing good, being good and honestly working, then what else is there but to gain time and experience?”

Come meet Nick Guerra, and fellow comedians, Ramon Rivas and Aida Rodriguez when they perform at Dr. Grin’s at The B.O.B. Wednesday, March 13. Show starts at 7:00 p.m. and tickets are $15.00. Beautiful and talented local comedian, Nardos Osterhart will be your host.

10 Awesome Spring Break Getaways With Kids

For legions of kids in the United States, spring break is a week-long hiatus that falls anytime between mid-March and mid-April. It’s an excellent opportunity for families to start putting away their winter gear and embrace the warmer times ahead.

1. Orlando, Florida
   Orlando, the world’s number one family destination, is wildly popular during spring break. Disney World is one of the main attractions. One of the most essential tips for surviving a trip to Disney World during spring break is choosing the right accommodations. Orlando has other fun things to do during spring break including attending the Epcot International Flower & Garden Festival or relaxing at one of the Orlando Hotels with lazy rivers. The Universal Orlando Resort is a popular draw too.

2. Washington, DC for Cherry Blossoms
   Every spring, the nation’s capital explodes with blooming cherry blossom trees. The National Cherry Blossom Festival takes place from mid-March to mid-April—smack in the middle of spring break for many families. The cherry blossom trees grow in three National Park Service locations: Around the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park, in East Potomac Park (Hains Point), and on the Washington Monument grounds. Signature Festival events include the Opening Ceremony, the Blossom Kite Festival, and the National Cherry Blossom Festival Parade.

3. Family Cruise
   For many families, a cruise offers the best of all worlds. The most family-friendly cruise lines provide a slew of activities to keep everyone happy with many itinerary options.

4. US Virgin Islands
   Since 2015, when the U.S. and Cuba resumed diplomatic ties for the first time in more than 50 years, travel to Cuba has been opening up for Americans. While the kind of allowable trips is still limited to specific categories of travel, you no longer have to apply for a visa. Travel with older children might be a learning opportunity.

5. Nashville, Tennessee
   Country music fans will enjoy a visit to Music City. Go to concerts at the iconic Ryman Auditorium, tour the Country Music Hall of Fame & Museum and visit the Bluebird Café.

6. Cuba

7. Caribbean and Mexico
   An all-inclusive getaway in the sun and surf might be a good way to have an affordable spring break getaway. The Caribbean and Mexico are awash with all-inclusive resorts, but only some have an atmosphere that will be appropriate for all ages. There are kid-friendly chains like Divi Resorts that are known for their G-rated focus, family-friendly accommodations, and fantastic children’s programming. Beaches and Club Med have children’s programming and facilities that make an all-inclusive getaway appealing to parents.

NALAC Announces 43 Grants to Latinx Artists and Organizations

The National Association of Latino Arts and Cultures (NALAC) announced 43 NALAC Fund for the Arts grants. Totaling $267,000, the awards provide funding to 26 Latinx artists and collectives and 17 Latinx arts organizations in 13 states and Puerto Rico.

From San Juan to Seattle, the awardees will carry out their respective projects through 2019. Grantees were selected from a pool of nearly 400 applications by a national peer panel process involving 45 arts experts representing diverse disciplines, regions and ethnicities. “The NALAC Fund for the Arts is a glimpse into the incredible innovation, reimagining and creative engagement taking place across Latinx communities. We are so excited to support so many projects that truly push the envelope of Latinx cultural production,” said Adriana Rios, NALAC’s Grant Program Manager. A digital booklet with a full list of grantees, photos, and project details can be viewed here.

NALAC Fund for the Arts grants for artists and organizations range from $5,000 to $10,000. With support from the City of San Antonio’s Department of Arts & Culture, five artists based in San Antonio will receive grants of $5,400.

Playwright Virginia Grise and theater artist Manny Rivera will receive a $25,000 Mentorship Award, the largest-ever grant awarded by the organization. Grise will work with Rivera to stage an adaptation of Helena Maria Viramontes’ novel Their Dogs Came with Them at the Perryville Women’s Prison in Goodyear, Arizona, and Borderlands Theater in Tucson, Arizona. The show will explore themes of war, homelessness, mental illness, gang life and state violence. Through their collaboration, Grise and Rivera aim to continue an intergenerational conversation amongst queer communities of color and explore how artistic work is produced across borders and beyond bars.

Fernando Frias De La Parra will receive the Adán Medrano Legacy Award in Film, a $10,000 grant designed to support emerging Latinx filmmakers. The grant will support post-production of Ya No Estoy Aquí, a narrative film about a 17-year-old Mexican boy who migrates from Monterrey, Mexico to Jackson Heights, New York. The film has been supported by the Sundance Institute, Cinereach, and the San Francisco Film Society.

Earlier last month, NALAC awarded an additional $25,000 to ten artists in Puerto Rico in order to support artistic production on the island. In partnership with the Pregones/Puerto Rican Traveling Theater of New York, the artists were recognized on February 9th at the Museum of Contemporary Art of Puerto Rico. You can read more about their projects here.

In the 13th cycle, NALAC also introduced the Pod Grant – a $2,500 grant opportunity that supports mobilizing and organizing projects by Latinx artists and cultural workers who support NALAC’s mission to develop and cultivate the Latinx arts field. The organization will award an additional $10,000 to four organizing projects across the country later this month.

In Memory of our Carnal Mike Falcon:
The Chicano Movement in Michigan lost a true leader this past January 11, 2019. Michael Charles Falcon, Sr. was the first President of the Chicano Student Association of Eastern Michigan University in the early seventies. His family and friends held life celebrations in Tampa Florida and San Antonio in honor of his life. Born on June 15th 1951 to Christine Hunter and Frank Falcon, Mike was destined to enjoy a full life dedicating his life to family, friends and community. He should be remembered by the Michigan Community for his work on the campus of EMU where he helped form a student advocacy group guided by the late Carlos Falcon, Mike’s uncle and many students who challenge EMU to recruit and retain more Chicano students at a time when there were very few of us entering college. He assisted the United Farmworkers movement supporting the efforts of Cesar Chavez and marched in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti to advance civil rights for farmworkers. He worked to establish bilingual education and Chicano Studies programs. We will miss his active commentaries on social media and his calls of encouragement.

Our deepest sympathy to his family and friends expressed here and may his memory live on! ¡Que Viva La Raza!

-Dr. José A. Flores, Former President of the CSA at EMU

El plan de la joven sobredotada es contribuir a revertir el atraso que tiene México en la enseñanza de las matemáticas.

Con tan solo 17 años de edad, la mexicana Dafne Almazán Anaya fue admitida en el Master Math for Teaching que imparte la Universidad de Harvard. Se trata de un hecho sin precedentes, ya que Dafne no sólo es la primera mexicana menor de edad admitida en esa maestría: en el posgrado no había ingresado ningún estudiante menor de 18 años desde hace 100 años.

Se trata de una formación académica que se enfoca en técnicas y modelos para la enseñanza de esta ciencia exacta, con lo cual, Dafne Almazán Anaya podrá desarrollar, en un futuro muy cercano, el talento matemático en México con las estrategias diseñadas en Harvard y así cumplir una de sus metas principales: comenzar a revertir el atraso educativo del país en matemáticas: “Mi plan es diseñar y trabajar con modelos para la enseñanza de Matemáticas en niños diagnosticados con sobredotación intelectual. Ese es precisamente uno de los enfoques del posgrado”, sostuvo Dafne Almazán Anaya.

La joven sobredotada planea graduarse en mayo de 2020, es decir, a los 18 años de edad, con lo cual se convertirá en uno de los pocos seres humanos que han obtenido este grado en la Universidad de Harvard, a tan corta edad y en tan poco tiempo.

Cabe recordar la vertiginosa carrera de Dafne Almazán Anaya. Ha participado en diversos foros nacionales e internacionales como el Congreso Nacional de la American Education Research Association (AERA) que se llevó a cabo en San Antonio, Texas y en Empoderando Mujeres 2017 en la Ciudad de México. La joven investigadora también tiene dos certificaciones en Harvard University (Educación Diferenciada y en Técnicas de Aprendizaje Significativo). Además de los logros académicos descritos, también fue considerada como una de las mujeres más poderosas de México (2016) y el año pasado obtuvo el Premio de la Juventud Ciudad de México por su aporte en materia académica y científica.

De niña fue parte de la primera generación del exitoso Programa de Potenciación Intelectual del Centro de Atención al Talento (CEDAT), el organismo más importante en América Latina en diagnóstico y seguimiento psicopedagógicos de niños sobredotados, al cual ingresó a los seis años de edad. Dafne tiene el récord en México de haber ingresado a una licenciatura: lo hizo a los 10 años. Se tituló a los 13 años como licenciada en psicología con lo cual obtuvo el reconocimiento internacional de ser la Psicóloga más Joven del Mundo.

At 13, she became the world’s youngest psychologist. Now, at 17, Mexicana Dafne Almazán is the youngest person accepted to Harvard graduate school in the last 100 years.

Dafne Almazán Anaya is “super-gifted.” At 3 years old, she could read and write; by 7, she had finished high school; at 10, she became the youngest student in Mexico to enroll in university. She graduated just three years later, becoming the world’s youngest psychologist.

Mexico’s youngest and brightest also plays piano, violin, and guitar, practices taekwondo and kempo, and speaks English, French, Latin, and Mandarin.

Dafne is passionate about teaching, and she will be enrolling in Harvard’s Master’s in Mathematics Education Program this fall. In a recent interview, Dafne said:

"[I want] to be able to help children, so they don’t suffer [through school], and show them that they too can accomplish many things."

Dafne comes from a family of prodigies; her older brother was the world’s youngest psychologist before her, and her sister is highly gifted as well.

Her parents founded Cedat, a center to serve super-gifted children, of which there are an estimated 1 million in Mexico. The center, where Dafne teaches, helps identify these super-gifted kids, who are often misdiagnosed as ADHD, and provides accelerated education, as well as arts and sports.

Gilda’s LaughFest returns to Grand Rapids this month and with it comes an array of seriously funny talent. This year, LaughFest welcomes Aida Rodríguez to the lineup during the Latino Showcase at 7 p.m. on March 13 at The B.O.B. in Grand Rapids.

Rodríguez, a Latina of Puerto Rican descent, is bringing her wide range of comedic topics to LaughFest that displays her culture, herself and even touches on today’s social issues with the hope of educating and entertaining.

“I’m on the mission to normalize, not Americanize or assimilate, Latino culture,” Rodríguez said. “I do talk about my family, I do talk about my Latinidad and being Puerto Rican, but I also talk about being a mother, about being a woman… I like talking about it all, and I do talk about social issues as well as my family stuff because we’re not frogs. We’re people. So it’s very important for me that I don’t get stuck in that label and (get) boxed into this place of ‘Latinos do this versus everybody else’ because we’re people and we rock. We (expletive) rock, and we do it in two languages.”

Her hope for her LaughFest audience is that they are entertained and know the hard work she put into her show.

“I’d like people to walk away with… knowing that I’m a true standup comedian,” Rodríguez said. “I’m a purist when it comes to comedy and for me nothing matters more in the world than to be respected as a true comedian from the audiences as well as my peers. So I’d just like people walking away knowing that I really put time and effort and love into bringing my show to them and that I really take it seriously. And I respect every single human being who takes a moment out of their time to come see me.”

Gilda’s LaughFest is a “seriously funny” comedy festival centered around the idea that laughter can heal those who have been affected by cancer, death or tragedy - something that Rodríguez can relate to having dealt with all three in a short timespan. In 2013 she lost her grandmother to cancer and an uncle to a hate crime and leaned on her comedy as a form of healing.

“Bringing their stories to stage, talking about my life and my family, bringing it up to (the audience) and watching them laugh was healing for me,” Rodríguez said. “So I do believe that laughter is healing. It also unites people.”

Tickets are still available for the Latino Showcase, which also hosts comedians Nick Guerra and Ramon Rivas alongside Rodríguez. Tickets are $15 and available through the LaughFest website.

Regresa el festival de comedia “Gilda’s LaughFest” a Grand Rapids este mes e incluye unos cuantos comediantes. Este año, LaughFest le da la bienvenida a Aida Rodríguez durante el Showcase Latino a las 7 p.m. el 13 de marzo en el club The B.O.B. en Grand Rapids.

Rodríguez, una Latina puertorriqueña, trae su amplia gama de temas cómicos a LaughFest que muestra no solo su cultura pero también toca temas sociales de hoy con la esperanza de educar y a la vez entretenecer.

“Estoy en la misión de normalizar, no Americanizar o asimilar, la cultura Latina,” dijo Rodríguez. “Si hablo de mi familia, hablo de mi Latinidad y de ser puertorriqueña, pero también habló de lo que es ser madre y ser mujer… Me gusta hablar de todo eso y sí hablo de temas sociales al igual que de mi familia porque no somos ranas. Somos personas. Así que es bien importante para mí que no me quede atrapada bajo una clasificación y que me metan en una caja etiquetada como ‘los Latinos hacen esto y los demás no’ porque somos personas y somos super. Somos super, y lo somos en dos idiomas.”

Su esperanza para su público de LaughFest es que se diviertan y que sepan el esfuerzo que puso en su show.

“Me gustaría que la gente se vallan sabiendo que soy una verdadera comediante,” dijo Rodríguez. “Soy puritana con respecto a mi comedia y para mí nada más me importa en el mundo que ser respetada como una comediante verdadera de mi público igual que de mis compañeros. Así que me gustaría que las personas salgan del show sabiendo que realmente le dedique el tiempo y esfuerzo y amor en traerles un show y que me tomen en serio. Y respeto a cada persona que tome un momento de sus vidas para verme.”

El festival de comedia, LaughFest, es uno nombrado “seriamente cómico” y es centrado en la idea que la risa tiene el poder de curar aquellos quienes hayan sido afectados por el cáncer, la muerte o la tragedia - algo que Rodríguez entiende bien ya que ha tenido que lidiar con los tres en un corto tiempo. En el 2013 perdió a su abuela al cáncer y un tío a un crimen de odio y aprendió a apoyarse en su comedia como una forma de sobrepasar su dolor.

“Al llevar sus historias al escenario, al hablar de mi vida y mi familia, llevarles eso a mi público y verlos reírse fue una forma de curarme,” dijo Rodríguez. “Así que, si creo que la risa cura. También una a la gente.”

Las entradas para ver a Rodríguez en el Showcase Latino, que también incluye a los comediantes Nick Guerra y Ramón Rivas, todavía están disponibles. Las entradas son $15 y están disponibles en el sitio de web de LaughFest.
SUPREME COURT AGAIN TAKES NO ACTION ON DACA, LEAVING POLICY IN EFFECT FOR NOW

The U.S. Supreme Court again chose not to take action on the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program, which allows around 700,000 illegal immigrants brought to the United States as children to stay in the country. In November, the Trump administration had asked the Supreme Court to review the program.

The program, which President Trump and Republicans consider to be an example of presidential overreach, was established by President Obama in an executive memorandum in 2012. Then-Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced a plan to phase out DACA in late 2017, and the program would have ended in March 2018 if federal courts had not blocked it.

Three federal courts have blocked the phase-out, and a decision late last year by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals eventually upheld a ruling blocking it, allowing the administration to appeal to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court has twice declined to take up the case, leaving the program in place for now.

Last month, Mr. Trump offered a temporary extension to the program in exchange for funding for a border wall in a deal to reopen the government. Democrats immediately turned down the offer because the deal did not provide a permanent solution for DACA.

Although the court did not choose to address one controversial administration decision Tuesday, they did uphold another: they decided to allow the Trump administration to enforce its ban on transgender troops while litigation over the ban continues, granting the administration a stay on a lower court’s decision. The high court split 5-4 in allowing the plan to take effect, with the court’s five conservatives greenlighting it and its four liberal members saying they would not have.

La administración Trump hacía valer su prohibición a las tropas transgénero mientras los litigios sobre la prohibición continuaban, concediendo la Administración una estancia en la decisión de un tribunal inferior. La corte superior dividió 5-4 en permitir que el plan surta efecto, con los cinco conservadores de la corte que lo iluminaron y sus cuatro miembros liberales diciendo que no tendrían.

La Corte Suprema de los Estados Unidos decidió de nuevo no tomar medidas en el programa de acción diferida para llegadas de la infancia (DACA), que permite que alrededor de 700,000 inmigrantes ilegales llegados a los Estados Unidos como niños permanezcan en el país. En noviembre, la administración Trump había pedido a la Corte Suprema que revisase el programa.

El programa, que el Presidente Trump y los republicanos consideran un ejemplo de sobrealcance presidencial, fue establecido por el Presidente Obama en un memorándum Ejecutivo en 2012. El entonces Procurador General Jeff Sessions anunció un plan para eliminar la DACA a finales de 2017, y el programa habría terminado en marzo de 2018 si los tribunales federales no lo hubieran bloqueado.

Tres tribunales federales han bloqueado la eliminación gradual, y una decisión en finales del año pasado por el noveno Tribunal de Apelaciones del circuito de Estados Unidos finalmente confirmó una decisión que lo bloqueaba, lo que permitió a la administración apelar ante la Corte Suprema. El Tribunal Supremo se ha negado dos veces a asumir el caso, dejando el programa en su lugar por ahora.

El mes pasado, el Sr. Trump ofreció una extensión temporal al programa a cambio de la financiación de un muro fronterizo en un acuerdo para reabrir el gobierno. Los demócratas inmediatamente rechazaron la oferta porque el acuerdo no proporcionó una solución permanente para DACA.

Aunque el Tribunal no eligió hacer frente a una controvertida decisión de administración el martes, sí defendían otra: decidieron permitir que...
Venezuelan Vice President Delcy Rodríguez announced last month the closure of three bridges connecting the country with Colombia.

Due to the serious and illegal threats from the Colombian government against the peace and sovereignty of Venezuela, the government has decided to partially close the three bridges, Rodríguez tweeted.

The three bridges of Simon Bolivar, Santander and Union are the most important border crossings between Venezuela and Colombia.

The move came after the United States and other countries in the region, in coordination with the Venezuelan opposition, declared their plan to deliver aid into Venezuela.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said that the United States will start moving the “humanitarian aid” across the border into Venezuela.

According to a statement issued by the United States Agency for International Development, the United States has airlifted approximately 191 metric tons of relief supplies to the Colombian border city of Cucuta since Feb. 4.

At the same time, the United States began pre-positioning 178 metric tons of locally procured supplies in Boa Vista, near Brazil’s border with Venezuela, the State Department said last month.

Denying the existence of a humanitarian crisis, Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro warned that the forceful humanitarian aid is fake and might be the first step toward a foreign invasion.

Earlier, the Venezuelan government sealed off the country’s border with Brazil and suspended aerial and maritime communications with the neighboring islands of Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao to block U.S. aid shipment.

EL DESTINO DE MÉXICO Y AMÉRICA LATINA SE UNIÓ AL CONTROL DE VIOLENCIA

Por Dr. Jose A. Flores .... Continuación de la versión del artículo en español pag. 03

México y el resto de América Latina han vivido durante mucho tiempo en las sombras de los Estados Unidos, lo que proporciona un conjunto de recursos laborales con bajos salarios para que los Estados Unidos continúen una relación explotadora como corporaciones estadounidenses que han localizado negocios allí para aumentar las ganancias. Pocos mexicanos se han beneficiado de N.A.F.T.A. En por ejemplo, las plantas automotrices de los EE. UU. En México les pagaron a los trabajadores mexicanos entre $ 4 y $ 8 dólares por hora, en comparación con los $ 28 a $ 38 dólares por hora para los trabajadores de los EE. UU. La mayoría de los acuerdos comerciales favorables a los Estados Unidos han impulsado la inversión en México y América Latina, pero no lo suficiente como para elevar su PIB o mejorar las condiciones de vida de un gran número de mexicanos. El PIB promedio para México y América Latina está entre 4-6% respectivamente y debido a la lenta recuperación de una recesión global, hay pocas posibilidades de mejorar la mayoría de estos países. El resultado neto es que las personas se ven obligadas a irse por mejores oportunidades hacia el norte. Además, la promesa de empleos en los EE. UU. sigue siendo buena para los trabajadores indocumentados.

La inmigración a los Estados Unidos es impulsada por la pobreza extrema, la corrupción gubernamental, la inestabilidad, el crimen descontrolado y el comportamiento depredador de los cárteles en la ciudadanía. Sobrevivir a la violación, el robo, el asesinato y el aumento general de la violencia de pandillas al salir del país y buscar asilo en otros lugares es un comportamiento comprensible. Las tasas de criminalidad de El Salvador, Colombia, Brasil y Venezuela son notablemente más altas que en la mayoría de los demás países en el paraguas latinoamericano de naciones, ya que las interrupciones en el gobierno y la represión han afectado estas estadísticas. Casi 40-60 por cada 100,000 habitantes que experimentan muertes o crímenes violentos es una condición aterradora y los latinoamericanos enfrentan esto diariamente. Las guerras gubernamentales contra las drogas también crean “daños colaterales” que a veces se cobran vidas inocentes.

Los EE. UU., a través del presidente Trump, han tratado de reducir la ayuda a México y América Latina prometida por la administración de Obama a menos que los países puedan evitar que sus ciudadanos intenten abandonar el país. Los $ 750 millones en fondos de Obama se denominaron Alianza para la Prosperidad destinada a El Salvador, Guatemala y Honduras, pero apenas se espera que afecte el problema. Debemos adelantar un plan bilateral con México y un plan internacional con otras naciones latinoamericanas para abrir mercados para la inversión y aumentar el comercio para desarrollar oportunidades para los inversionistas estadounidenses y las mejores económicas de nuestros vecinos al sur del Río Bravo. Debemos explotar los recursos naturales de América Latina, incluyendo la compra de minerales, gas, petróleo y mano de obra humana a un precio justo que permita a las economías de nuestros vecinos triunfar.
Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez made headlines on February 8, 2019 when she openly questioned House committee members about the United States’ campaign finance laws. At the moment, we know that it’s legal for members of Congress and other elected officials—including the President—to fund their political campaigns using money from corporations that have an interest in shaping the country’s laws.

By Ingrid Cruz

Not only that, but members of Congress don’t currently have set term limits even though the President does. Here’s a dissection of Rep. Ocasio-Cortez’s questions (paraphrased below).

Can I run a campaign funded entirely by corporate political action committees (PACs)?

Yes. First, we have to know what a political action committee is. There are different types and they can all be involved in campaign financing for politicians they support. The Federal Election Commissions says there are:

- Separate segregated funds (SSFs): a political committee made up of labor unions corporations, trade associations, or member organizations that wants to raise money for a politician. They can also request funds from members that belong to these groups.
- Non-connected committees: a political committee that isn’t connected to member organization of any kind. They can ask for donations from anyone they want.
- Hybrid PACs: this allows a political action to committee to request donations from corporations, labor groups, and individuals. The money pays for voting drives, political campaigns, and ads. They keep a separate bank account that is subject to various laws.
- Super PACs: a political action committee that pays for various campaign expenses and can request unlimited amounts of donations from corporations, labor groups, individuals, and even other PACs.
- Leadership PAC: formed by a person that is currently elected. Donation limits are $5,000 per political candidate per election cycle.

Can I use PAC money to pay off people that need to be silenced?

Yes. Money raised in political action committees can be used to pay someone off if they have any complaints and/or personal problems with a candidate that is trying to run for office. Paying this person off is considered free speech and is meant to make sure the public doesn’t find out about questionable past actions from a political candidate.

When I win my election, can I use that money to write laws that are favorable to people who paid for my campaign?

Yes. Currently, elected officials in the United States can write laws that benefit people who donated money for their campaign. When this happens, laws change that usually benefit the corporations or industries that supported the elected official. If a politician in Congress writes a federal law that benefits a corporation, this could cause the company’s value to rise, and its stock value could go up. Other laws may make it easier for a type of industry to work while having less regulations from government to worry about.

Can I hold stocks in companies whose value might rise after I write laws that benefit them?

Yes. Currently, members of Congress can buy stocks in companies and then write laws that cause the value of these stocks to increase. This increases the personal wealth of a member of Congress, but it may not be helpful to the general public.

In addition, Ocasio-Cortez was able to prove that many of the laws that do hold members of Congress accountable to the American people don’t apply to the president.

Rep. Ocasio-Cortez also pointed out that some people in that House Committee hearing are possibly benefitting from current campaign finance laws that allow them to get rich if they write and pass certain legislation. Currently, there are also no term limits in Congress, which means that if a politician continues to run for office and win, they can keep benefitting from the many ways they can enrich themselves while in office.

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez reta los reglamentos de financiación de campañas en el Congreso

La Representante Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez hizo titulares el 8 de febrero 2019 cuando ella cuestionó abiertamente a un comité de la Cámara de Representantes acerca de las leyes de financiación de campañas políticas en los Estados Unidos. Este momento, sabemos que es legal que los miembros de Congresos y otros puestos electorales—incluyendo el presidente—financien sus campañas usando dinero de empresas que tienen un interés en formar las leyes del país.

No sólo esto, los miembros del Congreso no tienen límites de término aunque el presidente sí. En el Congreso, esto significa que si un candidato gana su elección, puede seguir en el poder sin límites hasta que decida no hacerlo. En el caso del presidente, por otro lado, el Sistema de Unión Americana no le permite a nadie ganar más de dos veces consecutivas. Sin embargo, los miembros del Congreso y otras personas en el poder puede estar financiando una campaña de acuerdo a sus intereses y metas.

¿Puedo llevar a cabo una campaña financiado totalmente por comités de acción política (PACs por sus siglas en inglés) empresariales?

Sí. Primero debemos saber que es un comité de acción política. Hay diferentes tipos y todos pueden involucrarse en las campañas de políticos que apoyan. La comisión federal electoral (FEC por sus siglas en inglés) dice que hay:

- Fondos separados segregados (SSFs, en inglés): un comité que puede hacer donaciones a candidatos, empresas, sindicatos, etc. Esta relación puede influir en las decisiones de las empresas que financian el comité.
- PACs híbridos: estos comités pueden hacer donaciones a empresas, sindicatos, individuos. El dinero recaudado puede ser utilizado para financiar otras campañas.
- PACs de liderazgo: estos comités pueden hacer donaciones ilimitadas a empresas, sindicatos, individuos y otras organizaciones.

¿Puedo tener acciones en una empresa cuyo valor subirá porque yo escribo leyes para beneficiarla?

Sí. Actualmente, los funcionarios electos en los Estados Unidos pueden escribir proyectos de ley que favorezcan a las empresas que donaron fondos a sus campañas. Cuando esto ocurre, las leyes que cambian normalmente le proveen beneficios a las empresas. En su caso, la empresa que sube de valor por una nueva ley que beneficia a la empresa.

¿Puedo tener acciones en una empresa cuyo valor subirá porque yo escribo leyes que les dan beneficios?

Sí. Por el momento, los miembros del Congreso pueden comprar acciones en empresas que les benefician. Sin embargo, esto no es normalmente lo que ocurre y muchos políticos tienden a vender sus acciones antes de hacerlas beneficios.

Además, Ocasio-Cortez también explicó que algunas personas presentes en la sesión política de la Cámara posiblemente están recibiendo beneficios de las leyes de financiamiento actual que les permiten escribir proyectos de ley y ratificar algunas leyes. Por ahora, no hay límites de término para miembros del Congreso. Esto quiere decir que si un funcionario sigue ganando sus campañas electorales, pueden seguir recibiendo estos beneficios mientras sigan trabajando.

Gloria Estefan: On your Feet!

Broadway Grand Rapids brought a little bit of Miami heat to DeVos Performance Hall with the premiere of the Emilio & Gloria Estefan musical biography, On Your Feet! Directed by Jerry Mitchell and choreographed by Sergio Trujillo, On Your Feet boasts an extremely talented cast and is jam packed with high energy and passion. You will have trouble sitting still in your seat through the whole production. Christie Prades and Eddie Noel shine as the Cuban-American power couple. Emilio and Gloria Estefan overcame racial barriers and fought to bring their rhythmic beats and Latin-infused pop music to mainstream America to become one of the biggest music sensations of the 1980’s. With songs like “Conga”, “Rhythm is Gonna Get You”, “1-2-3” and others, Get On Your Feet! definitely lives up to its name.

Oscar-winning author Alexander Dinelaris takes us from Miami to Cuba in small flashbacks as we meet the young Gloria and also the young Emilio. Their portrayers, Ana-Sofia Rodriguez and JeanPaul Medina Solano will wow you with their amazing performances.

Gloria and Emilio meet when Emilio asks a 17-year old Gloria to try out for this band, The Miami Latin Boys. When she auditions by singing “Anything For You,” inspired by her abuela, Consuelo, Emilio invites her to join the band, which they rechristen The Miami Sound Machine and the rest is musical history.

As they begin to find success recording Spanish language music like “Oye Mi Canto” and “Mi Tierra”, they find it difficult when they want to do a crossover single. The record company refuses to back them, wanting to keep them in the Latino market. Not to be deterred, the couple produce the single “Dr. Beat” themselves and hand deliver it to dance clubs and have friends flood the radio stations with requests until their producer takes notice and backs them on what will become their biggest hit, the ever popular “Conga”. As the first half ends, we see the cast conga off the stage for a little audience participation.

In the second half, we see Gloria’s star begin to rise but it costs her a relationship with her mother, played by Nancy Ticotin. Gloria continues to try and repair the fractured relationship, but before she can do that, tragedy strikes. The tour bus is in an accident that results in a spinal cord injury that nearly paralyzes Gloria and leaves her unable to perform. But strength and determination gets Gloria back on her feet as she reunites with her mother and gets love and support from her family and millions of fans worldwide. At the request of Dick Clark, she makes her comeback appearance at The American Music Awards, singing the inspirational song, “Coming Out of the Dark”, to, as Emilio puts it, “show the world that you’re back…show YOU that you’re back!”

On Your Feet! is a show that appeals to all ages, all cultures, and all families. It is inspiring, it is heartwarming, and it will move not only your feet, but also, your soul.

On Your Feet! runs through Sunday, February 24, with tickets starting at $38.00. Go online to www.ticketmaster.com or www.broadwaygrandrapids.com for more information or to see what exciting shows are coming for the 2019-2020 season!

¡Al fin llegó la gran noche de Premio Lo Nuestro 2019! La 31ª entrega contó con lo mejor de los cantantes latinos, quienes hicieron vibrar el escenario del AmericanAirlines Arena en Miami, Florida.

Marc Anthony fue el encargado de abrir la ceremonia y lo hizo de manera sorprendente: estrenando un tema musical llamado Tu Vida en la Mia. Pero las sorpresas no terminaron ahí, pues Ozuna se coronó como el gran triunfador de la noche con 9 premios, dejando atrás a Natti Natasha, quien tenía 15 nominaciones.

Uno de los momentos más increíbles de la entrega fue cuando Daddy Yankee fue homenajeado por su contribución al reggaetón, pues recordemos que es uno de los pioneros de este popular género musical. Thalía, Natti Natasha y Lali Esposito mantuvieron al filo de sus asientos a los espectadores con su explosiva actuación sobre el escenario, mientras que Alejandro Sanz presentó su nuevo tema Back in the City al lado de Nicky Jam. ¡Fue una noche digna de recordar!

The 2019 Premio Lo Nuestro awards have finally arrived! The 31st annual show was held at the AmericanAirlines Arena in Miami, Florida, where the world’s best Latinx stars quite literally shook the arena with their talent. Marc Anthony opened the awards with a surprise performance by debuting a new song titled Tu Vida en la Mia. But there were even more surprises—Ozuna was crowned with the most awards of the night (9 wins!), beating out Dominican superstar Natti Natasha who was up for fifteen nominations.

One of the night’s most incredible (and memorable!) moments of the night was when Daddy Yankee, one of reggaeton’s pioneering artists, was honored for his contribution to the genre. Another highlight was when Thalía, Natti Natasha and Lali Esposito gave an explosive performance that had all the guests dancing along and at the edge of their seats. Meanwhile, Alejandro Sanz performed his new track Back in the City with the help of Nicky Jam. It was a night to remember!

CAPTIVE STATE

Set in a Chicago neighborhood nearly a decade after an occupation by an extra-terrestrial force, "Captive State" explores the lives on both sides of the conflict - the collaborators and dissidents. Rated: PG-13. 'Captiva State' es una historia original de ciencia ficción ambientada en un barrio de Chicago una década después de la ocupación extraterrestre en la que se sumió esta sociedad autoritaria. La película explora ambas perspectivas del conflicto: la de aquellos que decidieron colaborar con los alienígenas recién llegados y la de los disidentes que se enfrentaron a la invasión. Una película que aprovecha las técnicas del lenguaje cinematográfico como una forma de crear un escenario de ciencia ficción que sirva para arrojar luz sobre el estado de vigilancia en el que nos encontramos, las amenazas a las libertades civiles y el papel de la disidencia dentro de una sociedad autoritaria. Una utopía, irónica y espacial.

Vandevere (Michael Keaton), who recruits the peculiar pachyderm for his newest, larger-than-life entertainment venture, Dreamland. Dumbo soars to new heights alongside a charming and spectacular aerial artist, Colette Marchant (Eva Green), until Holt learns that beneath its shiny veneer, Dreamland is full of dark secrets. Sus enormes orejas le convierten rápidamente en el hazmerreír de todos, excepto de dos jóvenes niños, Joe (Finley Hobbins) y Milly (Nico Parker), los hijos de Holt Farrier (Colin Farrell), una ex estrella de circo que acaba de regresar de la guerra y que debe hacer frente a los cambios de su vida mientras se ocupa de este pequeño animal. Weird, Cool, Unusual and WOW Cars!

By Forest Scott Strenzel – "Scooter"

I'm just going to toss out some weird, cool, and unusual vehicles to check out and maybe get surprised or produce a smile for this March Issue of La Voz.

First out of the gate is the silver 1959 Cadillac Cyclone concept car. It comes complete with a bubble top, gigantic fins and bullet front headlight covers. Then I grabbed up and picture of both the convertible and the coupe models of 1957 Brutsch Mopetta's in a light blue color. Next you will see what I call "which way is the front end," red Dormier Delta coupe. If you look closely you can see the headlight bezel that gives away the front of the crazy little car. Staying with red cars, how about the 1960 thru 1966 Mazda 360. I even got to sit in one back in about 1967 in Canada.

Continuing on to a scary radical ride, that happens to have a smaller picture, that I hope you can see in some detail. It is a yellow bus with a fake snake wrapped all around it. It is used to take people to and from an overseas Zoo from their parking lot. I'm sure the kids love being in it but maybe the moms not so much.

Next we’ll make a run back to the good old USA and checkout the red, silver and blue Chrysler Stream-liner concept car. Considering this was made in 1955, I’d say it seems to be fairly aerodynamically shaped. And it had fins which didn't come out in manufactured cars until 1957.

Then its corporate limo time, featuring a six door stainless steel DeLorean. A buddy of mine that owns a limo company in Pittsburgh tells me that formal limos usually have only two back doors and the business/corporate Limo's tend to have more than two doors.

Let's put the pedal to the metal and check out the fantastic blue Bonneville salt flats race vehicle that topped out at a blazing 419 MILES PER HOUR.

Lastly, and maybe one of the coolest cars is the yellow air ride car. I can't see a passenger door and it has ten headlights, so I guess they had tested it in the dark!

Have a good March, which in Michigan can be a warmer no snow month or a last big storm month.

Be careful out there,

Scooter
Meet the new Mr. & Mrs. Armelio and Kasey Aparicio of Grand Rapids. La Voz was honored to be invited to their wedding as they took their vows on January 27, 2019. They are part of The Community Voice’s west side’s strong Hispanic community. We wish them all the best as they begin their journey together.

Miss Isabel is well on her way to making it to the top one step at a time. She was first featured in La Voz. She has big dreams and is watching them come true daily as she strives for higher and higher goals. Each day she gives back to her community as well as those in her world.

Miss Avery Parmeter loves the University of Michigan (her favorite colors are maize and blue) as well as track, reading, chocolate chip pancakes, venison, and Captain Crunch. She loves snow days and was disappointed, as was I, when Hershey stopped putting the big words on their candy bars. She loves dogs and wants to help end pollution. Mother Kelly Parmeter is La Voz’s newest fan. A graduate of Lee High School in the Godfrey-Lee School district, she met her husband working at Pizza Hut in Grandville. Now we know why our orders were always wrong because the future husband and wife (Mom and Dad) may have been preoccupied? She (Kelly) will say no....... Casey Parmeter is a true hero, role model and United States Marines Veteran. As is often the case life presents us many challenges and mountains to climb. But it is those who are always moving forward who are driven to provide for their families and our communities. They lead by example. Prior to today Casey led the way in fighting for his daughter and just like the ending of a great movie, he found the dream lady of his life to be his bride. This amazing LaVoz featured family had a very special event recently. This past holiday season princess Avery was officially adopted by Kelly as her legal mother, as seen in this emotional photo by Sarah Loveall photography. http://www.loveallphotography.com/ This very "COOL" family does it all from crafting (her hobby) to video games and of course family night. With this story we hope to add reading La Voz to that family night. They were originally scheduled to be part of the Valentine’s edition, but we felt this is a story that stands by itself. This is one family that when you get to know them, their story makes a community better and makes their home very special.

Do you have what it takes? You do NOT have to be Barbie nor do you have to be perfect because if you have the drive and determination, we want you to give it a go and see if you can be that next "STAR" in the 2018 Michigan modeling search. How Heart Disease Disproportionately Affects Different Races

Dr. Gina Lynem-Walker

Understanding the Risk
Heart disease refers to a variety of cardiac events, including: stroke, heart failure, aorta dissection, arrhythmia, coronary artery disease, vascular disease and high blood pressure. While there are many modifiable risk factors associated with these conditions (diet, exercise, stress, sleep, etc.) a person cannot control the role that gender, age and race play.

- African Americans: African Americans are two to three times more likely to die from premature heart disease and stroke than their Caucasian counterparts. According to the American Heart Association, a higher blood pressure, or hypertension, affects the African American population more than any other race in the world. Obesity and Type 2 diabetes are also prevalent among this group.

- American Indians/Alaska Natives: Heart disease is the leading cause of death among American Indians and Alaska Natives, and more than 30 percent of deaths occur in people under the age of 65. Research links the heightened risk to a variety of factors, including genetics, smoking, stress and diet. To date, tobacco use among American Indians and Alaska Natives is higher than any other race or ethnic group. Michigan, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin are among the states with the highest rate of American Indian heart-related deaths.

- Asian-Americans/Pacific Islanders: Researchers have found heart disease causes more deaths among the Asian population than all cancers combined. The heightened risk for cardiac events has been linked to undiagnosed high blood pressure and/or high cholesterol, along with higher rates of physical inactivity. Diabetes, obesity and smoking also play a role in the risk for heart disease among Asian communities and subgroups.

- Hispanic/Latino Americans: Like Asian-Americans, heart disease affects Mexican-Americans at a higher rate than any form of cancer. The prevalence of diabetes and obesity among the Latino community increase the odds of stroke and other forms of cardiac dysfunction, and many heart-related events among Hispanics have been linked to high blood pressure.

Changing the Odds: Tips for Prevention
Regardless of race, 80 percent of premature heart disease and strokes are preventable. Certain modifiable behaviors can significantly reduce the risk of cardiac events, including:

- Balanced Diet – Aim for a diet rich in grains, fibers, plant-based fats and lean proteins to lower the risk of heart disease.

- Managing Stress – One of the leading causes of high blood pressure is stress. Over time, the change in blood vessel resistance takes away from the nutrients and blood flow to the heart, increasing the likelihood of stroke and other potentially fatal health problems.

- Getting Active – Establishing a routine of physical activity, even as low-impact as walking, can lower stress and improve blood flow/circulation to reduce the odds of heart disease.

- Regular Doctor Visits/Screenings – Get to know your doctor and schedule annual visits to assess health and screen for blood pressure, diabetes, lipid profiles and cholesterol. More than 40 percent are living with hypertension, often referred to as “the silent killer” due to its lack of identifiable symptoms.

Entendiendo el riesgo
La enfermedad cardíaca se refiere a una variedad de eventos cardíacos, incluyendo: accidente cerebrovascular, insuficiencia cardíaca, enfermedad de la aorta, arritmia, enfermedad de las arterias coronarias, enfermedad vascular y presión arterial alta. Si bien hay muchos factores de riesgo modificables asociados con estas condiciones (dieta, ejercicio, estrés, sueño, etc.), una persona no puede controlar el papel que juegan el género, la edad y la raza.

- Afroamericanos: los afroamericanos tienen dos o tres veces más probabilidades de morir por enfermedad cardíaca prematura y accidente cerebrovascular que sus homólogos caucásicos. Según la Asociación Americana del corazón, la presión arterial alta, o la hipertensión, afecta a la población afroamericana más que cualquier otra raza en el mundo. La obesidad y la diabetes tipo 2 también son prevalentes entre este grupo.

- Indios americanos/nativos de Alaska: la enfermedad cardíaca es la principal causa de muerte entre los indios americanos y los nativos de Alaska, y más del 30 por ciento de las muertes ocurren en personas mayores de 65 años de edad. La investigación vincula el riesgo aumentado a una variedad de factores, incluyendo la genética, el tabaquismo, el estrés y la dieta.

- Asiáticos-americanos/isleños del Pacífico: los investigadores han encontrado que las enfermedades cardíacas causan más muertes entre la población asiática que todos los cánceres combinados. El mayor riesgo de eventos cardíacos se ha relacionado con la presión arterial alta no diagnosticada y/o colesterol alto, junto con mayores tasas de inactividad física.

- Hispano/Latino Americanos: al igual que los asiáticos-americanos, las enfermedades cardíacas afectan a los mexicanos-americanos a un ritmo más alto que cualquier forma de cáncer. La prevalencia de diabetes y obesidad entre la comunidad Latina aumenta las probabilidades de accidente cerebrovascular y otras formas de disfunción cardíaca, y muchos eventos relacionados con el corazón entre los hispanos se han relacionado con la presión arterial alta.
