Grand Rapids may not have always been the most favorable place for foreign nationals to live and work but things may be changing for the better as many immigrants without U.S. immigration status are feeling a sigh of relief with the recent policy change by the Grand Rapids Police Department. A new City Manager, a new Chief of Police, heightened activism by local immigrant rights advocates, a national spotlight as the result of missteps of the past, and a community divided on the issue of police misconduct may have born results. Change in this case is welcomed! Welcomed also is a potential proposal to grant a special license for immigrants without immigration status in the State of Michigan similar to other states that have created a more welcoming environment without declaring sanctuary status. New York recently enabled immigrants to receive state issued driver’s licenses and 12 other states have previously done the same. It is time for Michigan to step up and pass this needed legislation to make our roads safer and enable a population of refugees of poverty provide for their families and contribute to our economy.

For many cities and states the issue of equal treatment of citizens and persons residing in their boundaries is a delicate matter requiring thoughtful considerations including the balancing of law, justice, humanitarianism and morality. As a community, we must recognize progress toward a goal and compromise. The actions of the City of Grand Rapids and its Police Department are laudable and demonstrate empathy to the issues confronting the foreign nationals residing among us.

In the new policy the states that the GRPD is not responsible for or has the authority to enforce federal civil immigration laws used to detain or remove undocumented immigrants from the U.S. That means GRPD does not serve as civil immigration enforcement for the federal government. The department does not perform immigration functions unrelated to the investigation and enforcement of criminal violations.

“All members of our police department – both sworn and civilian – are dedicated to serving everyone who lives, works and plays in our city with the highest degree of professionalism, dignity and respect,” Police Chief Eric Payne said. “This policy codifies that commitment and the expectation that everyone in our community receives equal service regardless of citizenship or immigration status.”

Under the policy, no member of GRPD may:

- Coerce, threaten with deportation or engage in verbal abuse with any person based on the person’s or the person’s family members’ actual or perceived immigration status or citizenship
- Inquire into a person’s immigration status when the person seeks police services, such as filing a police report or calling 911
- Stop, question, investigate, arrest, search or detain an individual based solely on actual or suspected immigration status, actual or suspected violations of federal civil immigration law, prior deportation order or other civil immigration document
- Inquire about immigration status of any person or require any individual to produce any document to prove their immigration status. Exceptions may be made for legitimate law enforcement needs. These include:
  - Complying with consular notification and diplomatic or consular immunity requirements
  - Information required by federal, state or city law, including background checks and employment requirements
  - When circumstances of an ongoing criminal investigation make the information relevant to the investigation – not civil immigration enforcement
- Request translation services from federal immigration authorities – unless there’s an imminent danger to the public

The policy allows officers to provide assistance to federal immigration authorities when there is an emergency that poses an immediate danger to public safety or federal agents. The policy also provides guidelines specific to the department’s investigations division and records unit as well as consular notification procedures and diplomatic immunity.

While other cities contemplate how best to police their citizenry, we suggest a close look at the GRPD and their policy as it is a step in the right direction!

Gun Lake Tribe Celebrates 20th Anniversary of Federal Re-Affirmation Tribe Reflects on a History of Struggle and Perseverance

The Gun Lake Tribe (Tribe), formally the Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band of Pottawatomie Indians, announced it will celebrate 20 years of federal re-affirmation by the United States of America. The Tribe has a unique history which is well documented under several treaties signed by the United States government, a historic reservation in present-day downtown Kalamazoo, and an affiliation with the Methodist Church that created an Indian community that has endured since 1838.

"Today we celebrate a remarkable history of perseverance, community, and culture," said Bob Peters, Chairman of the Gun Lake Tribe. "We also recognize the tremendous hardships our ancestors endured, which our present-day elders did as well, to keep the Bradley and Salem Indian communities, and families, intact. We are a proud people with a bright future, but we honor our past on this day."

In the early 19th century the Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band inhabited the Kalamazoo River valley. Chief Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish signed the 1821 Treaty of Chicago that created a three-mile square reservation for the Band at present-day downtown Kalamazoo. The City of Kalamazoo recently installed new street signs that feature 1821 reservation boundary markers.

After years of petitioning for federal recognition the Match-E-Be-Nash-She-Wish Band of Pottawotami Indians, known as the Gun Lake Tribe, achieved formal re-affirmation on August 23, 1999. The Tribe’s citizens would later vote to adopt a Tribal Constitution which established a democratically elected governing body of seven Tribal Council members.

Today the Tribe strives to provide services to its citizens such as health care, education and language and cultural preservation. The Gun Lake Casino opened in 2011 and now provides government gaming revenue that allows the Tribe to fund these important programs to maintain its self-sufficiency.

DETROIT – The American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan (ACLU) applauds the Grand Rapids Police Department’s (GRPD) foreign nationals policy announced last month. The policy comes after the ACLU and community partners have long been advocating for a policy to limit entanglement between the GRPD and U.S. Immigration Customs Enforcement (ICE).

“This new policy recognizes that the police are here to serve everyone in the community,” said Miriam Aukerman, ACLU of Michigan senior staff attorney. “Immigrants who need help from the police shouldn’t have to fear that if they call 911, they will lose their families and lives in America. This policy recognizes that when local police get involved in immigration enforcement, it undermines community trust, leads to racial profiling, and makes everyone less safe.”

Under the new policy, people cannot be stopped, questioned, arrested, searched, or detained based solely on suspected violations of civil immigration law. In the case of Mr. Ramos-Gomez, for example, Captain VanderKooi would have been barred from contacting ICE simply because he thought Mr. Ramos-Gomez was not in the country legally.

This policy also prohibits police from inquiring into a person’s immigration status when they are seeking police services.

“This policy will enhance public safety by encouraging victims and witnesses to come forward regardless of immigration status,” said Aukerman.
Guatemalans have chosen Alejandro Giammattei, a conservative who once led the country’s prison system, to be their next president.

A 63-year-old surgeon, Giammattei tried three times previously to become president before succeeding on his fourth attempt. He campaigned on a promise to fight crime and build "a permanent political force with a deep love for God, family and Guatemala" with his Vamos political party.

When he takes office on Jan. 14, Giammattei will face a range of serious issues that include rampant corruption, widespread poverty and unemployment.

He will also need to negotiate with President Trump, who last month threatened to impose a travel ban, tariffs on exports and taxes on migrants’ remittances if Guatemala did not comply with his immigration ambitions.

The Trump administration wants to reduce the numbers of migrants at the southern border by shifting the burden to Central American countries from which many migrants have fled.

The administration expected Guatemala to become a safe third-party country — which would require migrants who travel through Guatemala to request asylum there instead of seeking protection in the United States.

The deal was unpopular in Guatemala, and a high court blocked the country’s president, Jimmy Morales, from signing the agreement last month. Morales blamed the court for harming his "good relationship" with Washington.

Los guatemaltecos han elegido a Alejandro Giammattei, un conservador que una vez dirigió el sistema penitenciario del país, para ser su próximo presidente.

Cuando asuma el cargo el 14 de enero, Giammattei enfrentará una serie de problemas serios que incluyen la corrupción rampante, la pobreza generalizada y el desempleo.

También necesitará negociar con el presidente Trump, quien el mes pasado amenazó con imponer una prohibición de viajar, aranceles a las exportaciones e impuestos a las remesas de los migrantes si Guatemala no cumple con sus ambiciones de inmigración.
Meet Oscar Winner Wes Studi, A Rare Brand Of Vietnam Veteran

You may not know the name Wes Studi, but you would probably recognize his face, and you should.

Studi is a Cherokee, a Vietnam veteran and an accomplished actor. He has been acting for several decades and is well-known for his roles in movies like, “Dances With Wolves,” and “The Last of the Mohicans,” and many other roles on film and TV.

He recently received an Oscar, “Lifetime Achievement Award” for his acting career.

As a 17-year-old senior in high school at an Indian boarding school in Oklahoma, Studi got permission from his parents to join the National Guard. That was in the early 60s. He signed up for the usual 6-year hitch at that time.

While he was in the National Guard, he began to hear a lot of stories from returning Vietnam veterans and decided he wanted to know if he was up to that experience. With only a year to go on his original 6-year enlistment in the National Guard, Studi volunteered to go active duty and to go to Vietnam.

He served in Vietnam in 1967-1968. He was assigned to the 3rd Bn, 39th Infantry of the 9th Infantry Division and was stationed down in the Mekong Delta area. He arrived just in time for what was called the mini Tet. His unit was stationed near the coast in the delta. During the time he was there his unit would be deployed on many missions throughout that delta area.

Like so many returning Vietnam veterans, Studi’s coming home experience was made difficult, not so much by the negative attitudes that greeted us when we came home, that was bad enough, but by something more intimate, more personal, more interior. While in Vietnam we had grown used to living every moment of our lives aware of the imminent threat of death that hung around us like a pall in every moment, in every place. Because it was so present at all times, we grew accustomed to living with that tension. It shaped our consciousness, our “awakeness.” It made us constantly attentive to our surroundings, constantly keyed up to act at a moment’s notice.

Studi’s description of this made perfect sense to me. It resonated with my own experiences of coming home. We brought that aspect of the war home with us. You couldn’t just shake that off. It was a part of our being.

In those early years after coming home from Vietnam, before Studi decided to try out an acting career, he did a lot for his tribal community. He taught the Cherokee language and the Cherokee syllabary and was involved with the Cherokee language newspaper, among other things. He is active in Native American rights efforts as well.

The Veterans Site wishes to add its congratulations to Wes Studi for his recent recognition as an Oscar winner for his lifetime of superb acting and starring roles in such great and memorable movies. We honor him for his service to the country in Vietnam as well.

Thank you, Wes Studi for giving us such honest portrayals of Native American life over your decades long career.

Puede que no sepas el nombre de Wes Studi, pero probablemente reconocerías su rostro, y deberías. Studi es cherokee, veterano de Vietnam y actor consumado. Ha estado actuando durante varias décadas y es conocido por sus papeles en películas como "Dances With Wolves" y "The Last of the Mohicans", y muchos otros papeles en cine y televisión.

Recientemente recibió un Oscar, "Lifetime Achievement Award" por su carrera como actor.

Sirvió en Vietnam en 1967-1968. Fue asignado a la 3ra Bn, 39a Infantería de la 9na División de Infantería y fue estacionado en el área del Delta del Mekong. Llegó justo a tiempo para lo que se llamaba el mini Tet. Su unidad estaba en un lugar llamado el Fuerte Francés en uno de los ríos del Delta del Mekong, muy cerca de la costa. Durante el tiempo que estuvo allí, su unidad se desplegaría en muchas misiones en esa área del delta.

Al igual que muchos veteranos de Vietnam que regresan, la experiencia de regreso de Studi a casa se hizo difícil, no tanto por las actitudes negativas que nos recibieron cuando llegamos a casa, eso fue bastante malo, sino por algo más íntimo, más personal, más interior. Mientras que en Vietnam nos habíamos acostumbrado a vivir cada momento de nuestras vidas conscientes de la inminente amenaza de muerte que nos rodeaba como una palidez en cada momento, en cada lugar. Como estaba tan presente en todo momento, nos acostumbramos a vivir con esa tensión. Dio forma a nuestra conciencia, nuestra "vigilia". Nos hizo estar constantemente atentos a nuestro entorno, constantemente motivados para actuar en cualquier momento.

El Sitio de los Veteranos desea agregar sus felicitaciones a Wes Studi por su reciente reconocimiento como ganador del Oscar por su vida de excelente actuación y papeles protagonistas en películas tan grandiosas y memorables.

También lo honramos por su servicio al país en Vietnam. Gracias, Wes Studi, por darnos representaciones tan honradas de la vida de los nativos americanos a lo largo de sus décadas de carrera.
Outraged Community Members Take Over Lobby at Kent County Jail
Demanding an End to Contract with ICE

On a quiet Saturday morning, 50 people with signs and banners abruptly entered the Kent County jail lobby chanting “Hey Hey! Ho Ho! Racist ICE has got to go!” People also chanted “End the contract!” and “ICE out of Kent County!”

The group was made up of members from GR Rapid Response to ICE, Movimiento Cosecha GR, and other Kent County residents. Once inside the jail lobby, the group heard from a woman named Rosa who declined to give her last name. “I had been told that Kent County no longer held people for ICE. But my mother was in an accident, and the police took her to jail because she didn’t have a driver’s license.” As of 2008, the State of Michigan no longer issues licenses to undocumented immigrants. Rosa continued, “When I bailed her out, I could see her in the window, ready to come out. But then she turned away, and she was gone.”

Rosa’s mother had been turned over to ICE before she could exit the jail. Rosa said her mother spent three months in ICE detention before the family could bring her home. Her younger sisters, ages 7 and 15, found it difficult to carry on without their mother.

Cosecha GR organizer Nerida Aviles, speaking in Spanish and using an interpreter, said that the contract with ICE harms the immigrant community in Grand Rapids. She called on those in attendance to join the immigrant community in calling for an end to the contract. The contract ends and is up for renewal on September 30 of this year.

In January the Kent County Sheriff stated that the jail would no longer hold people in detention for ICE without a judicial warrant. Yet Karen Meyers, an organizer from Rapid Response, shared a letter written by lawyers representing the Sheriff’s Department which describes in detail how ICE has changed their tactics and how the jail continues to cooperate with them in detaining members of the immigrant community from the jail.

“The jail tells ICE when they are holding an undocumented immigrant. They alert ICE when that immigrant is being released from the jail. And they allow ICE inside the jail to seize that person—even before they have been processed out from the jail,” Meyers stated in her summary of the letter.

The march continued to the administrative offices of the Sheriff’s Department. There Rapid Response organizer JR Martin read a letter to the Sheriff’s Department that stated: “We are here today with two reminders and a demand. First, Kent County maintains a shameful contract with the agency that enforces this terror. Second, that contract expires next month. There is no reason to renew it. Whatever Kent County may tell itself, it is not safe for immigrants while ICE maintains any presence here. It is not a welcoming community while the county continues to collaborate. We demand that Kent County end the contract for good, refuse to continue enabling a fascist deportation force, and cease all contact with ICE.”

The group left an oversize copy of the letter taped to the front door of the administrative office, and signs stating “End The Contract” and “Stop Profiting from Our Misery: End the Contract” were placed on the lawn in front of the office.

Other communities in Michigan, such as Kalamazoo and Dearborn have been ending their contracts with detention facilities and jails, and states such as California have outlawed information-sharing agreements between local law enforcement and ICE. Organizers are calling on those who attended the rally as well as those who could not attend to call the Sheriff’s office on Monday, August 26 to the Sheriff’s office, demanding that the contract be ended and not renewed on September 30.

En un tranquilo sábado por la mañana, 50 personas con carteles y pancartas ingresaron abruptamente al lobby de la cárcel del condado de Kent gritando “¡Hola, hey! Ho Ho! ¡ICE racista tiene que irse!” “La gente también coreó “¡Termine el contrato! y ¡ICE fuera del condado de Kent!” .

El grupo dejó una copia de la carta pegada en la puerta principal de la oficina administrativa, y se colocaron carteles que decían “Termine el contrato” y “Detener el beneficio de nuestra miseria: Termine el contrato” en el césped frente a la oficina.
The Amazon rainforest is on fire. Here’s what that means for the environment.

It’s twice the size of India, according to the World Wildlife Fund, and it’s the largest remaining tropical rainforest in the world. It’s home to at least 10% of the world’s biodiversity, produces 20% of the world’s oxygen and helps regulate the temperature of the whole planet.

Without it, climate change could become irreversible -- a reality brought to light by the fires in the region that have been raging last month.

Here are some ways the Amazon rainforest helps the environment, and what these devastating fires could mean for climate change.

The Amazon contains 90 to 140 billion metric tons of carbon, according to WWF. Too much carbon in the atmosphere is one of the main reasons behind climate change.

Imagine if all of that carbon was released into the atmosphere. Imagine if even a fraction of it was.

The results could be devastating, the WWF says.

It’s like what we learned in grade school: Plants take in carbon and release oxygen. The Amazon is important because it produces so much oxygen -- but if those trees and other plants are destroyed, it wouldn’t be able to take in that much carbon anymore or produce nearly as much oxygen.

Before the fires, land conversion and deforestation made the Amazon release up to 0.5 billion metric tons of carbon per year, according to the WWF. Depending on the damage from these fires, that release would increase, accelerating climate change even further.

The Amazon helps regulate the world’s climate. Basically, the Amazon is a huge hydrological engine.

Water is released by plants into the atmosphere, and also to the ocean through the Amazon’s rivers. Weather patterns are largely driven by ocean currents, according to NOAA. Currents help regulate weather, transporting warm water and precipitation from the equator toward the poles, and colder water from the poles to the tropics. Without these currents, regional temperatures would be a lot more extreme.

Where does the Amazon come in? Well, because of its immense size, it releases a lot of water through evaporation. If we lose parts of it, that means less evaporation, which means it would contribute less to stabilizing our climate.

In return, we could see more severe temperatures around the world, along with severe droughts and changes in seasonality in the region, the WWF says.

The Amazon on Fire

It’s the doble del tamaño de la India, según el Fondo Mundial para la Naturaleza, y es la selva tropical tropical más grande que queda en el mundo. Alberga al menos el 10% de la biodiversidad del mundo, produce el 20% del oxígeno del mundo y ayuda a regular la temperatura de todo el planeta.

Sin él, el cambio climático podría volverse irreversible, una realidad sacada a la luz por los incendios en la región que se han desatado el mes pasado.

Aquí hay algunas formas en que la selva amazónica ayuda al medio ambiente y lo que estos incendios devastadores podrían significar para el cambio climático.

El Amazonas contiene de 90 a 140 mil millones de toneladas métricas de carbono, según WWF. Demasiado carbono en la atmósfera es una de las principales razones detrás del cambio climático.

Imagínese si todo ese carbono fuera liberado a la atmósfera. Imagínese si incluso una fracción de eso fuera.

Los resultados podrían ser devastadores, dice WWF.

Es como lo que aprendimos en la escuela primaria: las plantas absorben carbono y liberan oxígeno. El Amazonas es importante porque produce mucho oxígeno, pero si esos árboles y otras plantas se destruyen, ya no podría absorber tanto carbono ni producir casi tanto oxígeno.

Antes de los incendios, la conversión de tierras y la deforestación hicieron que la Amazonía liberara hasta 0.5 mil millones de toneladas métricas de carbono por año, según WWF. Dependiendo del daño de estos incendios, esa liberación aumentaría, acelerando aún más el cambio climático.

El Amazonas ayuda a regular el clima mundial. Básicamente, el Amazonas es un gran motor hidrológico.

Las plantas liberan agua a la atmósfera y también al océano a través de los ríos del Amazonas. Los patrones climáticos son en gran medida impulsados por las corrientes oceánicas, según NOAA. Las corrientes ayudan a regular el clima, transportan agua tibia y precipitaciones desde el ecuador hacia los polos, y agua más fría desde los polos hasta los trópicos. Sin estas corrientes, las temperaturas regionales serían mucho más extremas.

¿Dónde entra el Amazonas? Bueno, debido a su inmenso tamaño, libera una gran cantidad de agua por evaporación. Si perdemos partes, eso significa menos evaporación, lo que significa que contribuiría menos a estabilizar nuestro clima.

A cambio, podríamos ver temperaturas más severas en todo el mundo, junto con sequías severas y cambios en la estacionalidad en la región, dice WWF.

Naya Rivera (nacida Naya Marie Rivera el 12 de enero de 1987 en Valencia, California) actriz, cantante y modelo. A pesar de que saltó a la fama con el papel de su co-protagonista en Glee, que en realidad tiene una muy larga historia en el negocio del entretenimiento. Su madre Yolanda había trasladado a Los Ángeles para seguir su propia carrera como modelo, lo que, naturalmente, Naya también siguió sus pasos del mundo del espectáculo. Después de protagonizar anuncios de Kmart como bebé, Naya obtuvo su primer papel protagonista de televisión a los cuatro años. Ella pasó a estrella invitada en comedias de gran éxito, incluyendo Family Matters, El Príncipe de Bel-Air y The Bernie Mac Show. Junto con su impresionante carrera en la televisión, ella también tiene planes para lanzar un álbum en solitario en Columbia Records.

Naya es mejor conocida por interpretar Santana Lopez en Glee.

Aunque Naya según los informes tuvo una breve relación con Mark Salling, su co-estrella en Glee, ha logrado mantener su vida privada en secreto. A continuación, comenzó a salir con Big Sean en 2013 y que se comprometió unos meses más tarde, pero terminaron separándose en el 2014. Naya después comenzó a salir con el actor Ryan Dorsey y la pareja rápidamente se casó en Cabo San Lucas, México, en la misma fecha que ella y Big Sean se habría casado - 19 de julio de 2014.

Después de haber cancelado su compromiso con el rapero Big Sean, Naya Rivera inició una relación con el actor Ryan Dorsey llegando al altar el día 19 de julio de 2014, en una ceremonia privada realizada en Los Cabos.

El día 24 de febrero del 2015 Naya confirmó su embarazo por sus redes sociales. En noviembre de 2017 fue arrestada por agredir a su esposo Ryan Dorsey, en el condado de Kanawha, West Virginia.

Naya Marie Rivera (born January 12, 1987) is an American actress and singer. She began her career as a child actress and model, appearing in national television commercials before landing the role of Hillary Winston on the short-lived CBS sitcom The Royal Family at the age of 4 (1991–1992), for which she received a nomination for a Young Artist Award. After a series of recurring television roles and guest spots as a teenager, Rivera received her breakthrough role as an adult as Santana Lopez on the Fox television series Glee (2009–2015), for which she received nominations for numerous accolades. America Ferrera, Eva Longoria Reassure Latinx Community in Open Letter: 'You Are Not Alone'

America Ferrera, Eva Longoria, Mónica Ramírez, Wilder Valderrama and over 150 Latinx leaders in entertainment, business and activism sent a message of solidarity to their community last month (Aug. 16) following ICE raids, the El Paso shooting and reports of poor migrant detention conditions.

"If you are feeling terrified, heartbroken and defeated by the barrage of attacks on our community, you are not alone," the Latinx leaders wrote in an open letter to the familia Latina that was published in The New York Times, La Opinion, El Nuevo Herald and El Diario newspapers on Friday. "But, we will not be broken. We will not be silenced. We will continue to denounce any hateful and inhumane treatment of our community. We will demand dignity and justice."

The letter, which was published in English in the Times and Spanish in Spanish-language newspapers, referenced "hate crimes" — including the Aug. 3 El Paso shooting at a Walmart in Texas that targeted Latinx families and left 22 dead and 24 injured, which is being investigated as an act of terrorism — as a motivation for the message. It cited last week’s ICE raids in Mississippi that brought an estimated 680 workers who were believed not to have documentation to work in the U.S. into custody, the Trump administration’s child separation policy and Trump’s political rhetoric about immigrants as well.

"The indignities and cruelty we have endured will never change the truth that the contributions we make to this country are invaluable," the letter continues. "Our humanity must be respected. And, we won’t stop organizing for ourselves, our children, and for the soul of this nation." To "allies," the letter asks that they hold leaders accountable, support community organizations and do their part to speak up and act against "hate."

Prominent signees include including actors Zoe Saldana, Salma Hayek Pinault, Jimmy Smits, Kate del Castillo, Eugenio Derbez, Demian Bichir, Alexis Bledel, Gina Rodriguez, Jennifer Lopez, Lin-Manuel Miranda and José Andrés.

Mónica Ramírez, the founder of Justice for Migrant Women and Esperanza: The Immigrant Women’s Legal Initiative of the Southern Poverty Law Center, got the idea for the letter in the aftermath of the Mississippi ICE raids on Aug. 7. That day and the day following, she reached out to Latinx leaders in entertainment and other fields to pull a message together. "I just really felt strongly that we needed to speak with one voice to our community in such a difficult moment," she says.

She felt that it was important to bring in prominent names in the Latinx community because “they represent different areas of life for Latinx communities.” In addition, each of the signees "have people who look up to them and listen to them, whether that’s inside or outside the Latinx community,” and she wanted to utilize those networks.

Signee Olga Segura, the actor-producer behind The Dinner and Verónica, said that she wanted to sign the letter because "We want our community to know that we are not alone. It’s inspiring to see many people starting to link arms in support of the Latinx community and our country."

Ultimately, Ramírez hopes the letter shows that Latinx leadership is needed in the U.S. at present. "We think that it is a symbol of our leadership in the way that we as a community are known for being a loving and open community, we believe that this is the kind of leadership that is needed in the country and that we want people to follow."

Los latinos en Hollywood se unieron para enviar un mensaje de solidaridad y amor a la comunidad Latinx. America Ferrera, Eva Longoria, Diane Guerrero, Jennifer Lopez, Gina Rodriguez, Lin-Manuel Miranda, Zoe Saldana, Salma Hayek y Ricky Martin son algunos de los más de 200 actores, músicos, artistas, activistas y líderes laborales y de derechos civiles que han firmado una carta abierta en apoyo de los latinos en el país. La misiva "Querida Familia Latina", se envió tras el tiroteo en El Paso, Texas, y las redadas de ICE, se publicó en inglés y español este viernes 16 de agosto en el New York Times, El Nuevo Heraldo, La Opinión y El Diario.

Gina, America, Eva, Zoe y Rosario firmaron la carta abierta en apoyo a la comunidad Latinx. La poderosa carta destaca los recientes ataques contra los latinos en Estados Unidos, incluido el tiroteo masivo en El Paso, Texas, en el que 22 personas perdieron la vida y otras 24 resultaron heridas en un Walmart a principios de este mes, además de las redadas de ICE que tomaron bajo custodia a 680 personas, en Mississippi.

THE COMMUNITY VOICE LA VOZ / SEPTEMBER 2019 21
Legendary Green Beret Roy Benavidez is the star of a graphic novel about his Vietnam heroics

Master Sgt. Roy Benavidez has long been a legend in the Special Forces community and now you can read about the Medal of Honor recipient’s bravery in a new graphic novel published by the Association of the U.S. Army.

Benavidez is the subject of AUSA’s second Medal of Honor graphic novel. The first was about Sgt. Alvin York and it came out last year.

His story is almost too incredible to believe. Wounded by a land mine in 1965 during his first tour in Vietnam, Benavidez was initially told he’d never walk again. But the tough soldier proved the doctors wrong, requalified for airborne and went on to join Special Forces.

On May 2, 1968 Benavidez hopped onto a helicopter to rescue a 12-man Special Forces team that was pinned down on the Vietnam-Cambodia border. Before he even reached the stricken team, he was wounded in the right leg, face, and head.

He dragged half of the wounded team members onto a helicopter but he was wounded in the abdomen and back just as the helicopter crashed with all onboard.

Benavidez pulled the wounded troops out of the crashed helicopter; called in airstrikes to keep the oncoming enemy at bay; killed an enemy soldier with his knife after being bayoneted him in each arm; and he personally rescued eight troops.

By the time he got back to base, he had lost so much blood from his bullet, shrapnel, and bayonet wounds that he could not move. His comrades assumed he was dead and began zipping him up in a body bag. With his last ounce of strength, Benavidez spat to prove he was still alive.

“The amount of determination that this guy showed in his life was just really awe inspiring and it was a story to share with everyone,” said Joseph Craig, of AUSA.

Craig hired the creative team for the Benavidez graphic novel and made sure the script and artwork were historically accurate. Both Medal of Honor graphic novels are online and AUSA plans to issue a printed compendium after the fourth book.

What Craig found so inspiring about Benavidez’s story is that his courage was extraordinary but not superhuman.

“He’s not a superhero,” Craig said. “He’s a human being. He showed determination and never quit. This is a guy who just never took no for an answer and just kept fighting in every moment.”

Celso Piña, 'el Rebelde del Acordeón' fallece a los 66 años

El cantante y compositor mexicano Celso Piña murió el pasado 21 de Agosto a los 66 años de edad a causa de un infarto por el cual fue ingresado de emergencia en un hospital de Monterrey.

La Tuna Group destacó que Piña deja ‘un intenso vacío’ pero un ‘gran legado para siempre’.

El músico tenía agendada una presentación el 5 de septiembre en la Feria de Cadereyta 2019, de acuerdo con su cuenta de Twitter, la cual, aún registró actividad hasta esta mañana.

Piña, nacido el 6 de abril de 1953 en Monterrey, Nuevo León, fue reconocido por haber mezclado el sonido tropical de la cumbia y el vallenato con el género regional norteño.

Su carrera musical despegó a partir de la década de 1980 cuando su padre le regaló un acordeón y comenzó a tocar cumbia, con la cual logró popularidad en el barrio donde creció en Monterrey, en fiestas familiares y bailes públicos.

Reconocido autodidacta del acordeón, formó la banda musical Celso Piña y su ronda Bogotá.

Mexican musician Celso Pina, famed as "the rebel of the accordion" for mixing eclectic styles with traditional Colombian cumbia, died on August 21st of a heart attack in his hometown of Monterrey, his record label La Tuna Records said.

He was 66 years old, according to local media.

With an interest in genres ranging from ska to hip-hop, Pina collaborated with a number of major Mexican rock artists including Cafe Tacvba, Lila Downs and Julieta Venegas. In 2002 his solo album "Barrio Bravo" was nominated for a Latin Grammy.

The composer and singer began playing music with his brothers growing up in Monterrey near the northern border, according to his official website. He picked up the accordion in his late 20s, and, still in Monterrey, learned Colombia’s celebrated vallenato style, central to the bouncy cumbia genre.

"Nobody can resist cumbia," Pina wrote in his last tweet before his death, ahead of concerts planned in the United States, one of some 30 countries he had toured, according to his profile on the Spotify music streaming platform.

"The rebel of the accordion has left us. His music united Latin American cultures and captivated Americans," the U.S. Embassy in Mexico wrote on Twitter.

JUDY
Winter 1968 and showbiz legend Judy Garland arrives in Swinging London to perform a five-week sold-out run at The Talk of the Town. It is 30 years since she shot to global stardom in The Wizard of Oz, but if her voice has weakened, its dramatic intensity has only grown. As she prepares for the show, battles with management, charms musicians and reminiscences with friends and adoring fans, her wit and warmth shine through. Even her dreams of love seem undimmed as she embarks on a whirlwind romance with Mickey Deans, her soon-to-be fifth husband. Featuring some of her best-known songs, the film celebrates the voice, the capacity for love, and the sheer pizzazz of “the world’s greatest entertainer.”

SCOOTER’S been here, there and just about everywhere, finding cool and unusual rides for you all to check out.

This month Scooter was out collecting pictures of many different model years and levels of interesting rides. Enjoy!

First up is a 25 yr old Motor City guy’s flat black and green pristine, custom tuner. Then locally in Grand Rapids, I found El Morro’s Low Rider 1998 silver Lincoln Town car sitting in front of his Tattoo shop. When I went inside and quickly found out he is in the know about LA VOZ Magazine, and was happy to have me show his Low Rider in the magazine. Shortly after picture taking and his giving me the details on his Lincoln, I turned around and caught this super sharp Low Rider bicycle on display in the corner. Turns out it is basically his son’s regal ride.

And, how about the attention gathering young 23 year old’s black and purple Nissan Skyline. This one had the sound of mega horsepower resting under the hood.

Then I stopped over to a Hispanic friend’s. John’s General Repair and Low Rider Shop to check out what he had hanging out there. He told me that he and his crew right now we’re busy doing repairs on stock vehicles. But, if I went to his driveway, which is almost on my same block, he told me I’d find one of his buddy’s Messi’s black 1985 Buick Regal, that’s straight as an arrow and cool looking.

Changing gears, here is one that you’d have to be about 80 years old to remember it. In its day it was a rare, unusual vehicle from Mr. Henry Ford. It’s a 1915 Ford CENTER DOOR Model T. And back then all of Henry’s cars were painted black. But in checking it out further, you can see that it’s only got one door on each side. Plus, they are in the middle of the car, which looks crazy I thought. Also, they came with only tan cloth interior. However back then it had an elegant oval rear window. To get in, you had to step upon the running board after opening the door and flip the front seat forward and walk to the front seats, getting there by going between the seats, or just sit down in the back seat if you wanted to. Cars back then had no consoles so the walk up front was easy. Also that’s why the roof is a bit taller than a regular Model T. Another piece of interest, all Model Ts came with a whopping 20 horse power four cylinder engine.

Now, please be sure to look more than passing at the white and red weird / back then cool looking car named the BEATNIC BANDIT. It is one of seven wild vehicles that were hand built by world famous Ed Roth. Plus he was the 1st big time custom T-shirt guy, as well as the whole RAT FINK thing. At the Detroit Autorama custom car show in 1962. I had Ed custom spray me a T shirt that was considered so wild (not dirty) that I got sent home from high school because of its “cool”.

Any if you kids or moms or dads think today’s youth have wild dress attire at times look up Rat Fink and Ed Roth’s creations. RIP buddy. He was way ahead of his time for sure.

Ending up, I wish you all to go out and enjoy the rest of our non snow days for the end of 2119. Scooter

Influenza activity picked up again last month, reaching a new peak this season. Still, this season remains far milder than last year, according to the Centers for Diseases Control and Prevention (CDC).

The flu is now widespread in 48 states and Puerto Rico. Since October 1, 2018, there’s been up to 20.4 million reported cases of the flu, between 8.2 and 9.6 million flu-related medical visits, 214,000 to 256,000 hospitalizations, and 13,600 to 22,300 deaths, the CDC estimates.

An additional seven pediatric deaths were reported last month, bringing the total of flu-related deaths in children to 41.

Flu season is definitely here, and the CDC expects activity to remain elevated for several weeks.

This year’s vaccine is very effective
Some experts attribute the calmer flu season to the effectiveness of this year’s vaccine. But the success of the shot depends on how old you are.

Early estimates found that influenza vaccines have “reduced the risk of medically attended influenza-related illness by almost half (47 percent) in vaccinated people so far this season,” the CDC said. Trusted Source

For children up to 17 years, the vaccine is estimated to be 61 percent effective. Approximately 24 percent of adults ages 50 and older have been protected by the shot.

To compare, the vaccine was reported to be 36 percent effective at this time last year.

The vaccine must be reformulated each year to match the most common flu strains. This year’s vaccine was designed to attack four strains: H1N1, H3N2, Influenza A, and Influenza B.

The predominate strain this year has been the H1N1 virus, with the H3N2 strain popping up more in southeastern states. Because this year’s shot contains these strains, those who got vaccinated are well protected.

The vaccine not only prevents the flu, but reduces the duration and severity of symptoms.

The CDC encourages people who haven’t gotten the shot to do so. Even if you already had the flu this year, it’s worth getting vaccinated.

“Flu vaccines protect against more than one strain of the flu, and just because you were infected with one strain of the flu doesn’t mean you won’t get a second infection with another strain that’s circulating,” Dr. Amesh Adalja, an infectious disease specialist at the Johns Hopkins University Center for Health Security, told Healthline. Adalja is also a spokesperson for Theravir.

H1N1 is typically less severe than other strains
Approximately 90 percent of the cases reported this year are the H1N1 type of flu, which tends to be less severe than last year’s dominant strain H3N2.

In general, fever tends to be greater in those who have H3N2 compared to those with H1N1. Some doctors have reported difficulties diagnosing this year’s main strain. That’s because some people who’ve tested positive for the flu only exhibited a fever and no other symptoms.

“H1N1 causes a milder flu with milder symptoms. Because of this, the flu may seem like a bad cold, so the less severe, the less likely people are to see a doctor or be diagnosed,” said Dr. Adrian Cotton, an internist and chief of medical operations at Loma Linda University Health.

Typical flu symptoms include cough, fever, fatigue, and body aches. Nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea may occur in more severe cases.

Flu season can last until May
Health experts predict that flu activity will start to wane within the next month or so. But you shouldn’t let your guard down because new cases will likely be reported as late as May.

“Flu season typically peaks in February, so it’s not surprising to see cases continue to increase. I expect cases will begin to taper off in the next few weeks,” Adalja said.

It’s crucial to continue taking preventive measures against the flu. Wash your hands frequently, get vaccinated, and eat foods rich in vitamins and minerals, such as whole foods and vegetables, to boost your immunity, Cotton said.

If you start experiencing symptoms, see a doctor as soon as possible. Antiviral medTrusted SourcecationsTrusted Source that treat the flu work best when administered within two days of falling ill. Otherwise, it’s best to avoid public places and ride it out at home until your symptoms start to clear up.
