Captain Hyperscaler announces college and university expansion, Hyperscaler Academy

Captain Hyperscaler launches new Hyperscaler Academy branch, specializing in accredited college and university training programs.

DETROIT, August 18, 2025 – Captain Hyperscaler is taking the next step in educational leadership, launching Hyperscaler Academy, a new division of the organization geared toward providing training courses to higher education institutions. Beginning in late 2025, Hyperscaler Academy will partner with the Metropolitan School of Business and Management (MSBM) to offer professional skills training courses to undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral students. MSBM offers global self-study programs, allowing students with the flexibility to grow their skills at their convenience.

"It has always been my goal to expand our educational programs to accredited college and university levels. The partnership with MSBM is allowing us to offer these degree programs globally under our new Hyperscaler Academy division," said Dwayne Natwick, CEO.

Hyperscaler Academy will follow the same philosophy as its parent company; striving to create a learning environment that is inclusive, collaborative, and supportive. As the Hyperscaler Academy website states, the organization recognizes that every individual has unique talents and strengths and aims to help students discover and develop their full potential.

"Hyperscaler Academy will be offering more than just certifications," Natwick said. "These programs will provide Endorsed Diplomas, Bachelorette, Masters, and even Doctoral degrees through globally accredited Universities."

Hyperscaler Academy plans to launch Certificate and Endorsed Diploma courses in late 2025. The new training organization will then roll out Bachelorette, Masters, and Doctoral courses in early 2026.
