Hey Joel,

Please meet Priscilla Eckert. You know I've been telling you how she saved my dad when he was in his last week of life. I felt bad when I told you the story the second time...since I didn't remember I had already told it to you. You know me - I'm the biggest critic of healthcare providers and our healthcare system. But, Priscilla has far exceeded any standard I ever set for home care and more. I mean it Joel. Your parents have been so good to me ... for more than 40 years. Now let me give back the tiniest bit. Talk to Priscilla about what they need. I suggest you let her guide you on how to help them now. She is a nurse - a hospice nurse. The best kind. But she is so much more than that. She can start with fewer hours and let your mom get comfortable with that. If she thinks there's something different or better she can advise you on whom to call. Joel, my mother now has 2 caregivers from On Call Home Care Services. She gets 24/7 care and each one is with her 3.5 days per week. One of them can drive her anywhere she wants. I think my mom can't decide which one she likes better. So far, Elissa has been happy with every single caregiver Priscilla has placed with her. Priscilla is always professional and supervises her employees and staff very well.

Priscilla,

I've known Joel since we were about 12 years old. He is one of my closest friends and a person who has been there for me during many difficult times in life. Joel helps many people just by talking with them. He is the type of guy who can connect with anyone and has sincere interest in who they are. His parents are wonderful, fine, caring, solid people with a strong marriage. Just as in the case of my parents, Joel's parents are ready for some assistance to help them remain independent. Please do what you can to help meet their needs. It would be a huge favor to me if I could know Joel's parents are safer and have a better quality of life due to your expertise.

Thank you both in advance for meeting one another here. You both make this world (and MY world) a better place.
