Mental Health Awareness Month: Shining a Light on the Black Community

May is Mental Health Awareness Month, an annual observance first established in 1949 to spark open conversations, reduce stigma, and promote access to care. For the Black community, this month holds particular significance. African Americans face disproportionate mental health challenges rooted in systemic racism, historical trauma, economic pressures, and daily microaggressions, yet they often encounter significant barriers to support.

The Reality of Disparities

Statistics paint a sobering picture. Black adults are approximately 20% more likely than the general population to experience serious mental health conditions such as depression, anxiety, and PTSD. Despite this heightened risk, Black adults were 36% less likely than U.S. adults overall to receive mental health treatment in 2024. Suicide rates among Black youth and young adults have risen sharply—a 58% increase between 2011 and 2021—with suicide ranking as the third leading cause of death for Black individuals aged 15-24.

These numbers stem from layered factors. Chronic stress from racial discrimination, housing insecurity, unemployment, and limited access to culturally competent care compound the burden. Historical mistrust of medical systems, stemming from events like the Tuskegee Syphilis Study, further deepens reluctance to seek help. Cultural stigma plays a powerful role too: many in the community view mental health struggles as a sign of weakness or something to handle privately through faith and family resilience alone. As a result, silence often prevails where healing is needed.

Mental Health Awareness Month: Shining a Light on the Black Community

Breaking the Silence

Mental Health Awareness Month offers a vital platform to challenge these norms. Initiatives like NAMI's "Sharing Hope" program highlight stories from Black communities, fostering connection over isolation. Organizations such as the Black Emotional and Mental Health Collective (BEAM), Black Mental Health Alliance, Black Men Heal, and Black Mental Wellness provide culturally relevant resources, training, and therapist directories tailored to Black experiences.

Community-led efforts emphasize strength-based approaches—drawing on cultural pride, spirituality, creative arts, and collective care. Open conversations in churches, barbershops, and social media are helping normalize therapy and self-care. Employers and institutions are increasingly called upon to address workplace racism and provide equitable mental health benefits.

A Call to Action

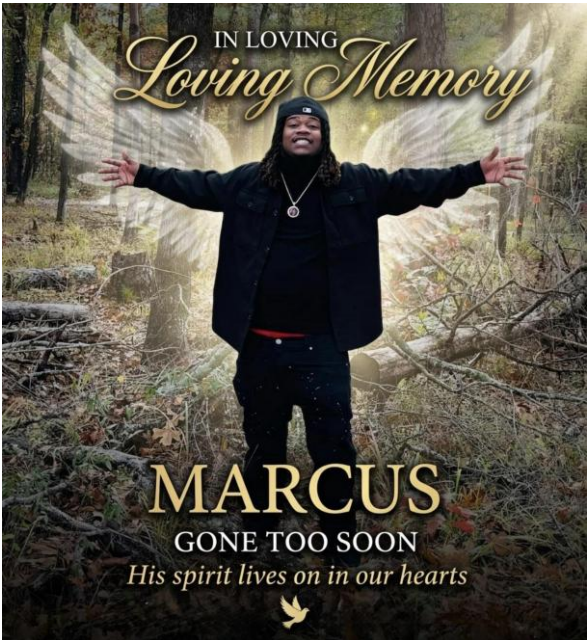

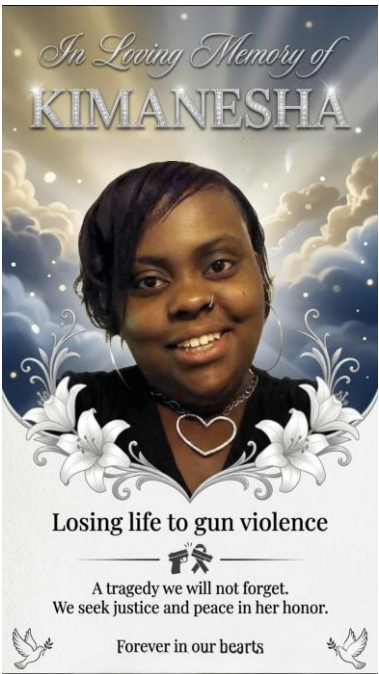

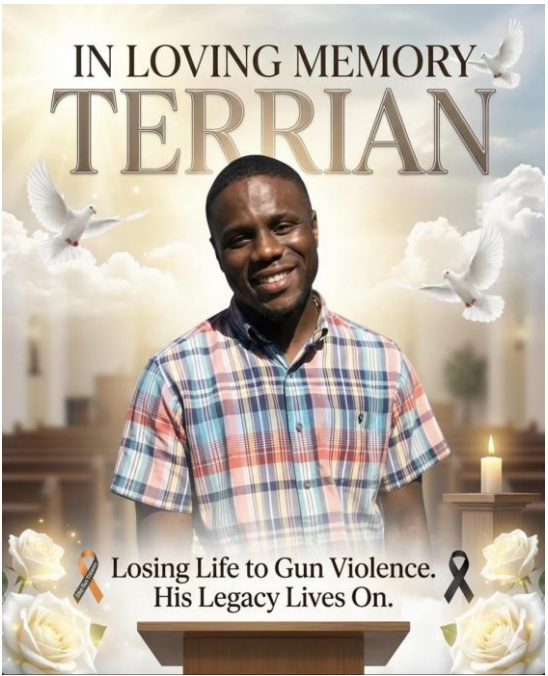

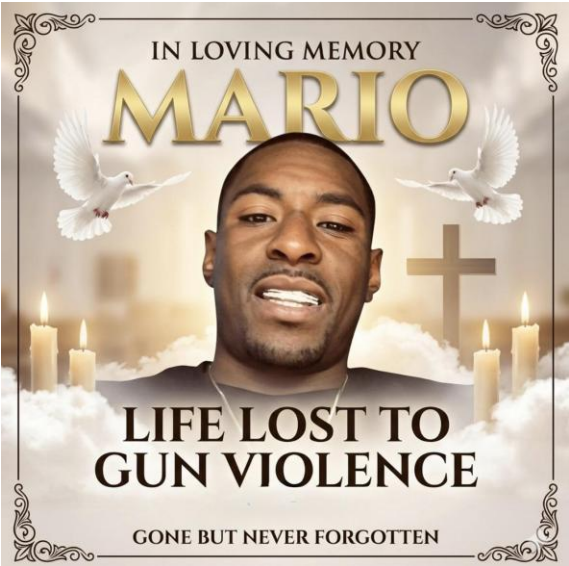

This May, individuals, families, and leaders must prioritize mental wellness as fiercely as physical health. Simple steps matter checking in on loved ones, sharing reliable resources, advocating for policy changes like expanded Medicaid and more Black mental health professionals, and practicing self-compassion without shame. Mental health is not a luxury—it is essential for thriving. By turning awareness into sustained action, the Black community can build stronger, more resilient futures where seeking help is an act of power, not weakness. Healing truly begins in community. No one should struggle alone.

May 26 NGHA talk will focus on resources on NSU's Creole Heritage Center

NATCHITOCHES – Northwestern State University's Creole Heritage Center Director Dr. Kent Peacock will speak on the Center's genealogical resources Tuesday, May 26, at the Natchitoches Genealogical and Historical Society. The event will begin at 7 p.m. at the Old Natchitoches Parish Courthouse at the corner of Second and Church streets. Admission is free and open to the public.

“For almost 30 years, the Center has been collecting items documenting the lives of Louisiana Creoles dating back to the 18th century,” said Peacock. “I look forward to sharing highlights of our Resource Library and discussing the Center's ongoing efforts to expand its collections and make them more accessible for anyone interested in tracing their family tree.”

The Center's Resource Library contains more than 5,000 items, including copies of church records, funeral and celebration programs, cemetery records, unpublished and published family history books, and transcribed state records, as well as access to Ancestry.com and Newspapers.com. Most items connect to the peoples of Natchitoches Parish, but some cover other parts of Louisiana and even to California, Illinois, Texas and elsewhere in the nation where Louisiana Creoles migrated. Also available is an online National Creole Family database containing more than 9,500 names and basic genealogical information.

Individuals interested in exploring their family's history or learning more about the heritage of Louisiana Creoles are invited to visit the Center or request research assistance from staff. The Center also continues to accept donations and copies of genealogical materials for its collections so it can help more people searching for information on their ancestors.

The Center is in Room 118 of Kyser Hall on NSU's Natchitoches campus with general summer hours of Monday – Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Visitors are encouraged to contact the Center in advance to confirm staff availability and allow staff time to prepare relevant research materials.

Connect with the Creole Heritage Center at (318) 357-6685 or creolecenter@nsula, on Facebook at NSULACreoleHeritageCenter, on Instagram at creolecenter_nsula or via our website www.nsula.edu/creole.

NAACP

THE FIGHT FOR FAIR MAPS STARTS HERE

From Texas and Missouri to Ohio, North Carolina and down to Florida, redistricting efforts are being designed to erase the influence and representation of Black communities when developing the policies that impact us daily. This political attack aims to silence our vote and reverse decades of hard-won progress.

The system of checks-and-balances is broken. In 2025, the Trump Administration requested some states secure more Republican congressional seats through off-cycle redistricting.

The Supreme Court has dismantled the Voting Rights Act by eliminating the Federal protection we have relied upon for the past 60 years.

Voters in states like California and Virginia are fighting back and we can all do the same in the 2026 midterm elections in November. Below, explore the population and power shifts underway.

Black Americans fought, through sacrifice, courage, and persistence, for the right to vote. That right was earned, not given.

In 2026, our vote remains one of the most powerful tools we have. It defends our rights, strengthens our communities, and shapes our future.

Honor the fight. Use your voice. Cast your vote.

The NAACP will continue to advocate for policies that dismantle systemic injustices and strive to improve the lives of the Black people and all Americans.

- DERRICK JOHNSON, PRESIDENT AND CEO, NAACP

RAPIDES:

Please join us in welcoming Tiffanie Kendrick to BOM Bank's Wimbledon branch as a Loan Assistant! Tiffanie lives in Alexandria, Louisiana, where she has spent most of her life. Her favorite way to spend time is with her family, which includes her husband, son, and two senior rescue dogs. We're thrilled to see Tiffanie's skills shine in this new position and can't wait to see the incredible work she will accomplish. Welcome to the BOM Bank family, Tiffanie!

CADDO/BOSSIER:

Please join us in welcoming Breanca (Bre) Simpson to BOM Bank's Fern branch as our Head Teller! Bre was born and raised in Shreveport, Louisiana, and is a proud graduate of Green Oaks High School. She enjoys shopping, traveling, journaling, and spending quality time with her family, especially her three beautiful children—Jayden, Ja'Liyah, and Ja'Miyah Broom. A fun fact about Bre: she describes herself as an introvert, though most people who know her would never guess! We're so excited to have Bre on our team and are confident that she will accomplish amazing things. Welcome, Bre!
