Medical Advice Disclaimer:

If you are suffering a medical emergency, call 000 and ask for an ambulance; or present to your GP or Emergency Department at your nearest hospital.

The website and its content, courses, information sheets, handouts, educational presentations and services (including but not limited to) written by, published by, presented by or provided by Empowered Forward is generalised information only and is not considered medical advice; as such, it must not take place of the information, medical advice, diagnosis or treatment of the health professional responsible for your care. Always consult with an appropriately qualified health professional.

The content, information, text, graphics, images and other written, visual or audio material written by, published by, presented by or provided by Empowered Forward is for informational purposes only. It is not a substitute for specific medical advice, diagnosis, or treatment recommendations of your health professional.

Never delay, neglect to seek, or disregard the advice from your health professional based on the information found through, by or in connection with Empowered Forward.

Whilst every effort is made to ensure that the information provided by Empowered Forward is accurate, the information does not ever take place of specific medical advice that you receive from a health professional caring for you; it is not a substitute. We also do not take responsibility for any legal liability or responsibility for the accuracy, currency and completeness of the services, courses and information offered and provided.

Empowered Forward do not accept liability or responsibility for any injury, harm, damage, loss or adverse outcome caused by any content, courses, information sheets, handouts, educational presentations and services that they provide, or are associated with.

The information, views and recommendations found in any content, courses, information sheets, handouts, educational presentations and services that are by or associated with Empowered Forward, do not necessarily represent and reflect the views of Empowered Forward, or indicate a commitment to a particular action.

We are careful in selecting the websites and other information, resources or images we link or refer to, but we are not responsible for and do not necessarily endorse their information. You need to make your own decisions about the accuracy, currency, and reliability of information presented and available to you in this instance. By accessing any third party website and material available on or through there, you acknowledge and agree that the terms of use, including licence terms and all other disclaimers and copyright statements, set out on the other agency's website or resource.
