About Us

The Lake Wenatchee Rec Club (LWRC), located between Lake Wenatchee and Fish Lake near Plain, WA, focuses on outdoor activities and community involvement including snowmobiling, dual sport motorcycle riding, fishing and promoting multiple uses of our public lands. Members (most are local but many live across Washington State) enjoy these activities and join the club to help support our efforts.

The club building, located at the Lake Wenatchee air strip, is used for club meetings and activities, and is available for group rentals. During fire activity, it is often used as a base for fire crews and rescue groups.

Many club events are open to the public and include snowmobile activities, dual sport rides and more. Club members participate in a variety of fundraising events to help support the Lake Wenatchee Rec Club, as well as local charitable organizations.

Membership is open to all by completing a membership application and submitting a $45 new member fee ($35 annual dues).

Jim Leo - consummate professional; ultimate volunteer

Jim Leo worked for the Everett Herald for over 47 years and was considered one of the top photo journalists in Washington State. He mentored several Everett-area photographers who became outstanding photo journalists in their respective communities.

Jim spent many years covering search and rescue efforts in Snohomish County, ultimately becoming a search and rescue volunteer. Ken Lakey, president of Snohomish County Search & Rescue, said that “Jim joined other volunteers to help those lost or hurt, often putting down his camera to aid those in need.”

For over 25 years, Jim was an outstanding volunteer for the LWRC, photographing many club events and producing the club’s newsletter.

Jim was also a volunteer for search and rescue in the Lake Wenatchee area, and was the club’s search and rescue “guru.” He was instrumental in setting up a communication center based in the LWRC building.

Congratulations to last year’s winner, Emma Sunitch!
