PROBLEM

Did you know some of the biggest challenges educators face include understanding different learning styles, student engagement, and behavior/classroom management? All of these factors may attribute to teacher burnout. As a result, educators are constantly searching for effective and practical solutions to address each of these challenges.

SOLUTION

Educators must be equipped with the knowledge and skills necessary to address these issues. This can be accomplished by taking a deep dive into three aspects of the classroom: content, culture, and community. With over 17 years of experience in education, Kasna Maat Ra has honed his abilities in curriculum development, instructional design, and student-centered teaching methodologies. As an Instructional Specialist, he has 100% growth in teacher development through lesson planning, establishing an effective classroom environment and classroom instruction.
