WHO?

One Hope fellows are young men and women who have graduated college or are at least 21 years old and are interested in being discipled in urban ministry, missional living, and nonprofit work. Fellows should be members in good standing at a local church and must be willing to live in Tulsa for 11 months to participate in the fellowship full time.

WHAT?

- Fellows live in the neighborhood around the Rose Bowl, alongside the neighbors One Hope serves. Fellows attend Springs of Grace Church in this neighborhood.
- Fellows gain hands-on experience in multiple areas of urban ministry; they will grow their skills for creative problem solving and collaboration in a multi-stake holder environment and build their capacity for life alongside their neighbors.
- Fellows serve as key team members in One Hope's kids and youth programs, community outreaches, and neighborhood events alongside staff members.
- Fellows learn about the Imago Dei, racial reconciliation, trauma care, peacemaking in the midst of violence, the priority and purpose of the local church, kingdom economics, reading the Bible with the poor, prophetic imagination and lament, incarnational living, human-centered design, and more.
- Fellows are housed in the community and receive a small monthly stipend.

WHERE?

One Hope Tulsa is a community-based non-profit cultivating safe spaces and relationships for neighborhood flourishing in Northeast Tulsa. We pursue our mission through kids, youth, and family programs, neighborhood care, and leadership development.

Northeast Tulsa neighbors experience high levels of trauma due to poverty, racial injustice, violence, and struggling institutions. Because of this, our approach is trauma-responsive, local church-based, and focused on our neighbors on the margins
