UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

MR. ADAM S. "WEED" REMALY

Adam S. Remaly is the acting director of the Technology Transition Office of the Air Force Research Laboratory (AFRL/RR) at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. Fusing the efforts of its Enterprise Integration, Advanced Technology Development, AFWERX/SPACEWERX, and Tech Maneuver divisions, this office accelerates the transition of game-changing technology to the warfighter. The organization is responsible for addressing urgent warfighter needs; designing and integrating DAF architectures; and for implementing the transformational component of the Air Force Science and Technology Strategy, including managing the Department of the Air Force's Vanguard programs.

Mr. Remaly began his Air Force career in 1989, receiving his commission from Rose Hulman Institute of Technology. During his active-duty career, Mr. Remaly served in Logistics, Test, Program Office, Research Laboratory, and Secretary of the Air Force Staff assignments during his 24-year career.

Mr. Remaly joined the Center for Rapid Innovation in February 2023. Prior to this assignment, Mr. Remaly entered federal civilian service in 2016 as a Program Manager in Air Force Research Laboratory Systems Technology Office.
