The word charisma comes from the late Latin charisma, which in turn comes from the ancient Greek charisma. Chárisma is a noun that derives from the verb charizomai, which means "to say or do something nice", "to show kindness or generosity", or "to give something away".

In the Dictionary of the Spanish Language, charisma is defined as "special capacity of some people to attract or fascinate." It is a masculine noun, so the adjectives and determiners that accompany it must agree in masculine
