

The Home Spa Animal Testing Statement

All products supplied by The Home Spa in the UK are manufactured in accordance with the following criteria.

No animal testing is carried out whatsoever nor any commissioned via third parties.

All products are entirely free of raw materials which are of animal origin.

All products are manufactured from ingredients whose original sources of production have formally declared the absence of any animal ingredients and further whose equipment is not used to process products of animal origin.

All products are manufactured using equipment which is not used in any way for the production of animal derived ingredients.

The type and source of the packaging used does not contain products of animal origin.

All products may accordingly be used in the secure knowledge that no risk originates from the product in regards to BSE or other animal derived diseases.

The only exceptions to the above are products sometimes considered to be of declarable origin. Certain ingredients used have an unescapable history of historical animal testing, such as bicarbonate of soda. As in first production of this raw material the msds stated it was historically tested on rats, and as the process of production has not altered, this status will remain a fact in the product history, regardless of the fact that its production no longer relies on any form of animal testing or cruelty.

The Home Spa is committed to using reputable sources of raw ingredients that do not involve the harming or testing in animals.