Touching Lives – Influencing Generations

Keynote

Would you approach decision-making differently if you knew you would impact 100 years and more beyond today?

Audience members will realize before the presentation's end that they touch more people, influence people more, and influence people 100 years and beyond.

The question is who and how, which is determined by our actions from today forward.

This session will inspire young and old that it is never too late or too early to touch people today and begin building your influence beyond our lifetimes.

It will provide specific examples and ideas from Richard's and others' experiences.

The closing will motivate the audience to act and share the message with others.
