

A WATERFRONT JOURNEY

From Humble Beginnings: Meet Samuel Perez

I started off in this industry as Perez Waterfront Construction. It was just me and a beat-up old pickup truck at the time. Regularly, I found myself working long hours with little to show for it, spending lots of time away from my family. I worked 6 days a week, leaving the 7th for church, always. It was the only day I rested, and I dedicated it to the Lord. But I had faith in my God and I loved being out on the water, and the beauty and serenity of Lake Bob Sandlin never got old.

I knew that this was where I belonged.

I poured my heart and soul into every project, determined to create something that would leave a lasting impact. I met amazing waterfront owners from different walks of life, and I realized the importance of a legacy - something that would outlive me and carry on my work and values.

I decided to leave behind the old name and start a new chapter in my life with Legacy Waterfront Construction. This new identity allowed me to build something that genuinely reflected my values and the legacy that I wanted to leave behind.
