

Love Lay Shattered Tonight

Truth and reality lie shattered tonight.
Soft on the floor in half-dimmed light.
Love didn't flee, but it felt untrue.
Stayed quiet, waited itself through.

Spoke with eyes, words were too loud.
Held each other without making vows.
Nothing was broken, just me and you,
Two hearts learned what patience do.

He carried fear like glass in his hands.
Be careful not to let it slip or to demand.
She steadied her world with a sigh.
Balancing love without asking why.

Truth and reality lie shattered tonight.
Soft on the floor in half-dimmed light.
Nothing was broken, just me and you,
Two hearts learned what patience do.

Space was distance, and pause was pain,
Love's shelter from pressure and strain.
Rest in the moment, unfinished but real.
Time showed what hearts choose to feel.

Truth's uncertainty, and life pulls apart.
Stayed without shouting, without a heart.
Reality bends, but love didn't scatter,
It softened, waited for truth to shatter.

On the floor in half-dimmed light.
Dreams and desires lost their fight.
Love lay shattered tonight.

