

I Saw Crying

I saw you crying from your apartment window.
I couldn't hear your sobbing, but I saw the tears.
The street was quiet, like love lost in silence.
Memories melted away with yesterday's snow.

Your hands were still, your breath was thin.
Sorrows whispered in your reddened eyes.
Every fallen tear tried hard to blink it back.
Intimate memories of us started to dim.

In one magical moment, I just held you there.
I was out of words; I didn't speak, nor moved.
Two hearts strung together by a thinning vow.
If not me, you have someone else to share.

If you cry again, I won't be outside the window.
Destiny is not for me to catch your fallen tears.
I tried to lift the sky, I couldn't, as you know.
You were disappointed, yet you didn't show.

In your heart, don't think you were ever alone.
I'm there, you could see my prints in the snow.

S. Red