At one time or another, we all have been either the victim of an uninspired gift or, on the other hand, the shopper without a clue. We know ... it's the thought that counts, but thank goodness SpoilHer.net is finally here.

The goal of SpoilHer.net is to assist men with gifts and special occasions for their significant other. Clientele are involved every step of the way in making gifts and requests special and meaningful. This could mean the selection and presentation of a birthday gift, an elaborate weekend getaway, or anything in between.

Through a membership, the client also receives planning, shopping, gift-wrapping and shipping for five special occasions, an e-mail reminder (a month in advance for each occasion), a personalized profile about the shoppee, gift history and weekly e-mailed relationship hints. Soon to come, the special lady will even be able to complete a "Spoil Me" registry. O.K., ladies, this just has to be more effective than leaving magazine clippings on the refrigerator, or those oh, so subtle "hints" on his side of the bathroom mirror!

Although Debi McCoy and Connie Barreras – SpoilHer.net owners and on-line romance makers – just started their business in February 2004, they can already boast many satisfied clients. This is a concept whose time has come. Surely there's a birthday, anniversary or other special occasions coming up, so men ... join the growing numbers who are learning how to spoil their women at www.spoilher.net. Your wife does not have to know, but she will most likely encourage you to spoil her!

Women ... why don't you clip out this article and tape it to his side of the bathroom mirror, or conveniently leave this page of the magazine sitting open on his favorite chair – yes, some very subtle hints indeed!
