TTE Skincare

100 Berry Creek Drive, Folsom
916-988-4961

TTE Skincare is a complete line of natural skincare products developed by Folsom residents, Myriam and Leo Liberman. Their every day home care line, which includes soaps, creams and lotions, uses Aloe Vera as a base and can be used for any, and all skin types. Their facials involve a special sulfur-free and additive-free clay to perform a Natural Exfoliation. These treatments, unlike most other skincare processes today, use no chemicals or machinery and are extremely gentle on the skin. The clay is so gentle and rich with minerals that it can be applied several times throughout the exfoliation process. It is gentle enough to be used in delicate areas, such as the neck, décolleté, lips and eyes and even on a baby's diaper rash, but therapeutic enough to cure even the worst rosacea, acne and sun damage.

In 1990, while living in the Bay Area, Myriam met a Native American esthetician right here in Folsom, who used this clay and skin care process. This changed Myriam's life forever - she became an esthetician, using only this clay for her facials, and even moved to Folsom. Myriam has an exclusive agreement with a Native American Tribe in Idaho for the natural clay that helps keep skin youthful. Women in the tribe have been using this clay for hundreds of years, and Myriam brought this wonder to her hometown.

Myriam works out of her Folsom home where two rooms have been converted into beautiful spa-like surroundings. Although she does have regular clientele, her main focus is local and nationwide education about her products. This involves hands-on training about the Natural Exfoliation process and this exclusive line of home care products. Her next endeavor is to use the school system and public classes to educate pre-teens about skin care, before acne and other problems begin.
