Listen closely to Grandpa's magical call,
In every plant, a spirit stands tall,
For his beautiful garden, a sacred sight,
Where life and love forever unite.

I work the earth with Grandpa near,
Under the sun, my job is clear.

My watering can, a faithful friend,
Each plant's thirst I gently tend.

Birds chirp their sound is sweet,
Their graceful flight, a joyful feat.

Upon our flowers, they gracefully land,
As they eat the sweet nectar, oh so grand.

In Grandpa's garden, a silent embrace,
Nature's beauty and grace.

 Red, yellow and purple roses
reaching for the sun above,
Blooming in colors that speak of love.

Grandpa's smile, a gentle guide,
Whispers of care that he can't hide.

In his garden where magic thrives,
It brings magical secrets to our lives.

In Grandpa's garden, earthworms dance,
Through soil rich and deep, they prance.

As they move with delicate grace,
Creating tunnels in their underground race.

Silent architects beneath the ground,
Their work a symphony without a sound.

Water and nutrients flow with ease,
To nourish plants in the gentle breeze.

Tiny animals with a big role to play,
In the garden's health, they pave the way.

Each wiggle, each burrow, a work of art,
Earthworms in Grandpa's garden play their part.

In the garden's hush,
Ladybugs march with silent care,
A squad unseen, through shadows so fare,
Their boots whispering on the dampened ground,
Guardians of greenery, in wisdom's bound.

Each leaf a stage for their joyful parade,
Nature's warriors ready to raid.

Protecting flowers from pests unswayed,
In harmony with the ecosystem they've made.

No need for toxins or a harmful spray,
These silent guardians keep threats at bay.
With each step taken, a balance they bring,
To the everchanging garden in the spring.
