9 Greatest Boxing Fight Matches of All Time

This kind of power punching defined heavyweight boxing in its heyday.

The 1976 brawl between George Foreman and Ron Lyle was a fight between two boxers who wanted to prove something.

Coming off his loss to Muhammad Ali, Rumble in the Jungle; (more of that story later). Foreman needed to fight his way back into the title position. At the same time, Lyle was desperate and determined to assert himself as a top contender.

So, the big men traded shots for five straight rounds, each going down twice in the interim.

In the end, George knocks Lyle down for a third and final time, putting an exclamation point on one of the most thrilling heavyweight boxing matches of all time.
