SUMMARY

Mobu Enterprises is a Woman-Owned, Minority business that began operations in 2018 as a green construction firm that builds residential and commercial structures out of shipping containers across the United States of America with some projects being procured overseas. Our goal is to enrich communities by providing sustainable housing and job opportunities in the municipalities we serve. We began the "Mobu Enterprise Green Construction Apprenticeship Program" as a means to demonstrate, to our locales, that we are committed to improving economic conditions by hiring locally. We recently revamped our business model that transitions us from site-built construction to modular built constructions. This gives us a competitive edge by allowing our plant to site production rates to triple by having a 24-hour manufacturing plant with a projected yield of 20 structures a month. We will also employ locals as we expand our plant business operations from state to state with no business interruption being affected by inconsistent weather like our counterparts.
