

Ways to Promote College and Career Readiness in Schools and Classrooms

Write the specific skill on the board.

Incorporate the skill into the lesson objective.

Remind students daily about college and career preparedness.

Have tee shirts made.

Advertise on social media.

Make posters to display around campus.

Hold a schoolwide assembly.

Bring a guest speaker.

Have them write the skills in their notes.

Create a College and Career Readiness Club on campus.

Have them write a sentence or two on the college and career readiness skills they are learning.

Send the information out to parents.

Give awards for college and career readiness.

Include the importance of college and career readiness skills in newsletters.

Make it a part of the school and classroom culture.

Work with the student leadership team (or ASB team) to devise other creative ways to promote college and career readiness schoolwide.
