

A few months ago, I dreamed up a platform that would enable you to find creative and fun things to do. I wanted to enable artists to become entrepreneurs, and I wanted people in cities to find ways to make their free-time more exciting and rewarding.

Skillit was born.

With a small and wonderful team, we have begun building a platform that lets you search “skillits,” events created and run by local artists and artisans, for you alone, with a group of friends, or with a diverse bunch, to enjoy as an activity where together you do something different and exciting.

Want to learn to make your own canvas, oil paint, and painting? We’ve got it. Want to learn how to turn yourself and three best friends into a four person barbershop quartet? We have an artist at the ready. Want to go to a dinner party where the food and language used are exclusively Portuguese?

Someone’s on it. We hope to have everything you can dream of, and so much more. Skillit is in its infancy, but in the coming weeks we will start sharing what we’re building on social media so you can watch the product grow. We’re so excited to be doing this, and I hope you’ll give us a shot. Stay tuned.

Keep doing,
-West
