The need for state-level action on paid leave to address racial, gender, and economic disparities

Why paid family and medical leave matters for Ohio’s economy

- Evidence from other state-based systems demonstrated that access to paid family and medical leave
  - Promotes economic stability and workforce participation for parents and caregivers
  - Improves retention and reduces turnover
- Women make up nearly half of Ohio’s labor force (48 percent) and more than one-quarter of its business owners (28 percent).
- Access to paid leave improves families’ overall stability and financial security, which has a positive economic impact.
Why paid family and medical leave matters for Ohio’s families

- More than 134,300 children are born in Ohio each year, and in 72 percent of all Ohio households with children – nearly 1.8 million homes – all parents have paying jobs.
- In the next 20 years, the share of the state’s population age 65 and older will grow by one-seventh. Older workers are more likely to experience serious medical conditions that require care.
- Women’s wages support their households. In Ohio, 55 percent of mothers are key family breadwinners.
- Across the country, many men want to play a larger role in caring for their families, but unsupportive policies and stigma hold them back.
The need for state action

● Despite the evidence of clear benefit, very few working people in the U.S. have paid family leave through their jobs: 20 percent of works overall, and just 8 percent of low-wage workers.

● In Ohio, even unpaid leave under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act is inaccessible for 61 percent of working people.

● Action at the state level is needed to ensure every working Ohioan has access, particularly women, workers of color, and low-income workers who have been left behind.
History of action from state champions

- Last three Ohio General Assemblies, state lawmakers (led by Rep. Kuhns the first session, then led by Rep. Boyd) proposed legislation to create a statewide paid family and medical leave program.
- Rep. Boyd has continued her advocacy and leadership on the issue of paid leave with efforts to bring back legislation this session.
A comprehensive, bold policy

A paid family and medical leave policy should do more than provide pay for existing FMLA. It should follow these evidence-based principles:

- Include comprehensive coverage of leave: parental, caregiving, and personal medical
- Cover all employers, regardless of size, sector, or classification of worker (including part time and contract workers)
- Provide adequate wage replacement for all leave circumstances
- Adopt an inclusive definition of an individual who is covered by caregiving leave
- Provide adequate leave time of at least 12-weeks
- Guarantee job-protection, anti-retaliation, and anti-discrimination protections
State-level program structure

- State level bills modeled as social insurance model, funded entirely by employees through premiums deducted from employees’ wages
- Businesses will not bear the financial costs of funding the program
- Employers currently offering paid leave policies that are employer-funded or a combination of employer- and employee-funded would be able to alleviate the financial costs of providing a policy themselves
State-level program structure

- An actuarial evaluation will determine: (1) the premium costs and (2) the administrative and technology costs of developing and operating a program.

- There are immense cost savings over the long-term for our state, for businesses, and for individuals by enacting paid leave - there is a cost to doing nothing.

- Previous Ohio bills were based on Colorado legislation, which provides some estimates for financial impact on workers and the state:
  - Estimates the total cost to an employee would be approximately $25 to $30 per year.
  - Estimates that the cost of running an actuarial evaluation and establishing the program would be approximately $400,000.
  - The state may apply for and accept gifts, grants, donations, and additional federal funding to supplement the costs of running the program.
The time is now

- Opportunity to build off of momentum from national efforts, where workers and business owners have expressed support of the issue, to deliver on a statewide paid leave policy
- Enacting a state paid leave program would help foster a state with healthy children and families
- It is an important tool to help Ohio’s economy rebuild from the COVID-19 crisis and to keep workers, especially women, in the workforce
