Commander:

Greetings everyone,
I'm pleased to see that the good Lord has blessed us once again.
Thank you, Lord.

This will be our last newsletter for 2024. Our post has accomplished a lot of things and helped many veterans this past year. Thank you to one and all for what you've done in making these things possible.

We are seeing a growth in the number of families coming to the Post. It's a true joy to hear all the laughter and see kids just being kids. I guess parents feel we are a kid friendly place and have a fun atmosphere. Thank you, Lord.

Our Post was having a problem with people not knowing where to put their dues. We solved the problem by installing four new mailboxes near the adjutant's office. Each mailbox will be labeled for The Legion, the Sons, the Riders and the Auxiliary. If you volunteer for anything with other organizations, please let us know. Keeping a record of our volunteer hours shows we are involved in our community. Anything you do for anybody without compensation can be counted as Community hours for our Post. This also shows that you are involved with our Post as an active member.

All you need to do is write down your name, the date, what you did, and the number of hours you volunteered for. Then submit it to the Post any way that's convenient for you.

I will end here with reminding you that "Jesus is the reason for the season". May God richly bless you and your family as you celebrate Christmas this year.

Juan Palacios
Your Commander

A note from the Sergeant at Arms

I wish you all a happy Christmas. When we meet again (2025) I would like to reiterate common courtesy, don't interrupt, raise a hand and wait to be acknowledged by the commander, stand up, salute is up to you. State your view. Give the courtesy you expect others to give you, PLEASE. (true fun fact ) Mr Potato Head was the first toy to be advertised on TV.

Chaplain's Corner:

As we close out 2024 I wish to the Post 21 members a very happy Christmas time. Take the time to remember how the good Lord has been there to bless you this year. As your Post Chaplain it has been a great blessing to pray for all the ones that have needed pray. I have been happy to pray for all of you.

Our post has done many great things this past year and we will still be doing great things in the new year of 2025. Take the time to read the Christmas story in "Matthew 1; 18 to 25". May the good Lord be with you on that day. Please stop and remember all the members that we have lost this past year. Keep in prayer the many ones that are having a hard time with the sickness that has them down. Remember that it can be hard when we grow old. I pray for all the ones that are dealing with sickness at this time. And my prayer it that the good Lord will be with them.

Take the time to ask yourself if there is something that I can do to better the Post and help in any way to make it a better place. We have a great post because of all the things that you have done. Remember that we still have opening on the E-Board that needs filled. Maybe you can be the one that can fill that spot. "THINK ABOUT IT".

May God Bless

4 Major Military Events That Happened on Christmas

1776: Washington Crosses the Delaware

On the night of December 25–26, 1776, General George Washington led the Continental Army across the icy Delaware River during the American Revolutionary War. This daring and strategic maneuver enabled the troops to launch a surprise attack on Hessian forces in Trenton, New Jersey, achieving a pivotal victory that boosted American morale and reinvigorated the fight for independence. Washington's crossing remains an enduring symbol of determination and leadership.

1864: First Battle of Fort Fisher

The First Battle of Fort Fisher (December 23–27, 1864) was an unsuccessful Union attempt to capture the Confederate stronghold near Wilmington, North Carolina. Despite a massive naval bombardment and a land assault, Union forces under General Benjamin Butler failed to breach the fort's defenses, leaving it in Confederate hands. The fort's survival allowed vital supplies to continue flowing to the Confederate Army.

1972: Operation Linebacker 2 North Vietnam

Operation Linebacker II (December 18–29, 1972), often called the "Christmas Bombing," was a massive U.S. air campaign against North Vietnam. Using heavy B-52 bombing raids, the operation targeted key infrastructure in Hanoi and Haiphong to pressure North Vietnam into resuming peace talks. It played a significant role in bringing about the Paris Peace Accords, leading to the end of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War.

1896: "Stars and Stripes Forever" Is Written

"The Stars and Stripes Forever" was written by John Philip Sousa on Christmas Day, 1896. Inspired during a trip back to the United States, Sousa composed the patriotic march, which later became the official National March of the United States in 1987. The piece remains an iconic symbol of American pride and patriotism.

Message from Paul Krutsch

"Thank you" to everyone who helped in our annual Christmas Tree Sale. It was a total group effort as all families in the Post participated. From loading to unloading of trees and then selling them to serving Hot Cocoa to the kids, there was plenty of help. Thanks to the Post #21 members, Riders, Auxiliary, and Sons for your efforts to assure our success. We went thru 200 trees in approximately 3 weeks. Over a dozen trees were donated to deserving families. Members donated over $400 to cover the cost of the donated trees and we ended up with a $2,940 profit. We are currently in touch with the North Carolina American Legion to see if we can use those funds to help out veterans impacted by the latest hurricane to hit their state. Thanks again and Merry Christmas.

With the increase in new customers we want to take this chance to remind us all that it is policy for members to carry their membership card, as well as, show the card when expecting discount prices on drinks. We appreciate your cooperation with this policy.

THE ARMED FORCES BOWL: HONORING SERVICE THROUGH SPORT

The Armed Forces Bowl is more than just another college football game; it is a celebration of the courage and sacrifice of the men and women who serve in the United States Armed Forces. Held annually in Fort Worth, Texas, this bowl game combines the excitement of college football with heartfelt tributes to the military, making it a unique and significant event in the sports calendar.

First played in 2003, the Armed Forces Bowl was initially sponsored by PlainsCapital Bank and later by Bell Helicopter, before Lockheed Martin became the title sponsor in 2014. The bowl has consistently aimed to honor and support the military community. Its partnerships with organizations such as the USO and various veterans’ groups underscore its commitment to recognizing the contributions of service members and their families.

The game typically features teams from the Mountain West Conference, American Athletic Conference, or other invited programs, offering a competitive and thrilling matchup each year. However, what sets the Armed Forces Bowl apart isn’t just the on-field action but the off-field tributes.

The Armed Forces Bowl integrates military recognition into nearly every aspect of the event. Halftime shows often include moving tributes to veterans, active-duty service members, and their families. Military flyovers, patriotic performances, and recognition ceremonies add a deeply emotional layer to the game-day experience.

One notable tradition is the awarding of the Armed Forces Merit Award, which recognizes an individual or group within college football who demonstrates exemplary service and support for the military. This award further cements the bowl’s dedication to bridging the gap between athletics and service.

Beyond honoring the military, the Armed Forces Bowl plays an integral role in the Fort Worth community. The influx of visitors boosts the local economy, while related events, such as military enlistment ceremonies and job fairs for veterans, provide lasting benefits. Additionally, proceeds from the game often support military-related charities, ensuring that the impact of the bowl extends well beyond the gridiron.

Over the years, the Armed Forces Bowl has produced several unforgettable games. For instance, the 2015 matchup between Cal and Air Force showcased a high-scoring affair led by Jared Goff, who would later become the first overall pick in the NFL Draft. Another standout was the 2008 game, where Houston rallied to defeat Air Force in a thrilling comeback.

As the Armed Forces Bowl continues to grow, its mission remains clear: to honor the sacrifices of service members while delivering high-quality college football entertainment. Fans can expect the tradition of excellence to continue, with future games bringing together the best of sportsmanship and patriotism.

Whether you’re a football enthusiast, a member of the military community, or simply someone who appreciates the values of dedication and service, the Armed Forces Bowl offers a meaningful and memorable experience. It stands as a testament to the enduring connection between sports and those who serve to protect our freedoms.

The Battle of the Bulge: A Turning Point in World War II

The Battle of the Bulge, fought from December 16, 1944, to January 25, 1945, was the last major German offensive on the Western Front during World War II. This desperate attempt by Adolf Hitler's forces to split the Allied lines and halt their advance into Germany marked one of the largest and bloodiest battles involving American troops.

By late 1944, the Allies had successfully landed in Normandy, liberated Paris, and were advancing toward Germany. The German forces, though retreating, were far from defeated. Hitler devised a bold plan to exploit the Ardennes Forest—a region deemed unlikely for a major offensive due to its dense woods and rugged terrain—to launch a surprise attack.

The objective was twofold: to capture the vital port of Antwerp, thereby crippling Allied supply lines, and to divide British and American forces, hoping to force a negotiated peace on the Western Front. To achieve this, Germany amassed 200,000 soldiers, 1,000 tanks, and 1,900 pieces of artillery, all while maintaining strict secrecy.

In the early hours of December 16, under the cover of dense fog, German forces launched a coordinated assault along an 80-mile front. The initial phase caught the Allies completely off guard. Poor weather conditions grounded Allied air support, allowing German troops to make significant advances. Within days, they created a salient, or "bulge," in the Allied front line, giving the battle its name.

Key towns, such as Bastogne in Belgium, became focal points of the conflict. Bastogne, held by the 101st Airborne Division, was surrounded and besieged. Despite being outnumbered and facing severe shortages of food, ammunition, and medical supplies, the American defenders held their ground. When the Germans demanded their surrender, General Anthony McAuliffe famously replied, "Nuts!"

The tide began to turn as reinforcements, including General George S. Patton's Third Army, arrived to relieve the besieged troops in Bastogne. Improved weather conditions in late December allowed Allied air forces to resume operations, devastating German supply lines and advancing troops.

By January, the Allies had successfully contained the German offensive and began pushing the enemy back. The battle ended on January 25, 1945, with the front lines restored to their pre-offensive positions.

The Battle of the Bulge was a costly engagement for both sides. The Germans suffered approximately 100,000 casualties, losing much of their remaining armored strength and experienced troops. For the Allies, the battle resulted in over 89,000 casualties, including more than 19,000 killed—making it the deadliest battle for American forces in World War II.

Strategically, the battle marked the beginning of the end for Nazi Germany. The failed offensive depleted Germany's resources and morale, leaving it incapable of mounting any significant resistance to the subsequent Allied advance into the heart of Germany. Within months, Adolf Hitler's regime would collapse, and the war in Europe would come to an end.

The Battle of the Bulge remains a testament to the resilience and determination of Allied forces. It exemplifies the high stakes and human cost of World War II, while underscoring the importance of strategic leadership and perseverance in the face of overwhelming odds.

Battle of New Orleans: A Pivotal Victory for both the War Of 1812 and United States History

The Battle of New Orleans, fought on January 8, 1815, was a pivotal and iconic engagement in the War of 1812. It marked the final major battle of the conflict and secured a decisive American victory against British forces, shaping the course of American history and solidifying the reputation of General Andrew Jackson as a national hero.

The War of 1812 was fought between the United States and Great Britain over a range of issues, including trade restrictions, impressment of American sailors, and territorial expansion. By late 1814, peace negotiations were underway in Ghent, Belgium. However, news traveled slowly, and neither side was aware that a treaty had been signed when the Battle of New Orleans occurred.

New Orleans, a vital port city on the Mississippi River, was a strategic target for the British. Capturing it would have allowed them to control access to the Mississippi River and disrupt American commerce and settlement in the region.

In December 1814, British forces, commanded by Major General Sir Edward Pakenham, launched an assault on New Orleans. General Andrew Jackson, a seasoned military leader known for his decisive actions, was tasked with defending the city. Jackson quickly organized a diverse and makeshift force that included U.S. Army regulars, state militias, free African Americans, Native Americans, and even pirates led by Jean Lafitte.

Jackson's forces prepared fortifications along the Rodriguez Canal, a defensive line just south of New Orleans. The Americans used the terrain to their advantage, creating barriers and positioning artillery to dominate the battlefield.

On the morning of January 8, 1815, the British launched a frontal assault on Jackson's well-prepared defenses. Despite their numerical advantage and disciplined ranks, the British faced devastating artillery and musket fire. The dense swamps and canals further hampered their movements, leaving them vulnerable.

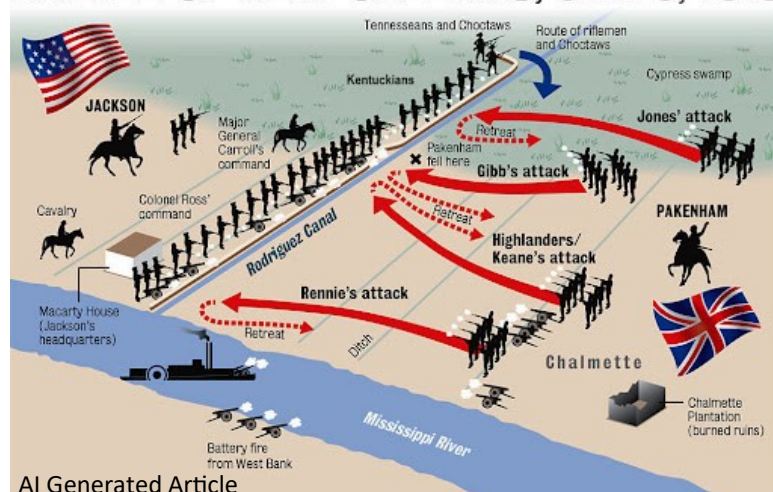

The American forces, entrenched behind their fortifications, inflicted heavy casualties on the British. General Pakenham was mortally wounded during the assault, and the British suffered over 2,000 casualties, including dead, wounded, and captured. In contrast, American losses were remarkably light, with fewer than 100 casualties.

The Battle of New Orleans was a resounding victory for the United States and a humiliating defeat for the British. Although the Treaty of Ghent had been signed on December 24, 1814, effectively ending the war, news of the treaty did not reach the combatants until weeks later. The battle had no bearing on the war's outcome but significantly boosted American morale and nationalism.

Andrew Jackson emerged as a celebrated national figure, eventually riding the wave of his popularity to the presidency in 1829. The battle also highlighted the importance of New Orleans and the Mississippi River to the young nation's economic and strategic interests.

The Battle of New Orleans remains a symbol of American resilience and ingenuity. It is commemorated annually in Louisiana and continues to hold a prominent place in U.S. military history.
