Description

We believe this may be a 31 Vanguard model, but that selection is no longer available on this service.

The Sea Ray Legacy: Excellence on the Water

For decades, Sea Ray has been synonymous with the American boating lifestyle, earned through a relentless commitment to craftsmanship and styling. Founded in 1959, Sea Ray was one of the first builders to master the use of fiberglass, a move that revolutionized the industry. By the early 1980s, they had solidified their reputation for building boats that weren't just functional, but aspirational—blending sleek, contemporary lines with the structural integrity needed for serious offshore excursions. When you buy a Sea Ray, you're investing in a pedigree of performance and a brand known for its high resale value and dedicated community of owners.

The 31 Vanguard: A True Express Cruiser

The 1981 Sea Ray 31 Vanguard stands as a classic example of the "express cruiser" era, perfectly balancing a massive cockpit with a surprisingly spacious interior. Designed for the social boater, the Vanguard features an expansive beam that provides exceptional stability and plenty of room for entertaining on deck. Its hull is celebrated for a smooth, predictable ride, making it just as capable of a sunset harbor cruise as it is a weekend run to the islands.

Inside, the 31 Vanguard feels like a true "home away from home." The layout is thoughtfully arranged to maximize every inch, featuring a full galley, a private head, and sleeping accommodations that comfortably host a small family or two couples. With its timeless profile and robust build quality, this 31 Vanguard isn't just a vintage vessel—it's a testament to a time when boats were built with substantial glasswork and classic proportions that never go out of style.
