AI Overview

Article 19(1)(g) of the Indian Constitution grants citizens the fundamental right to practice any profession, or to carry on any occupation, trade, or business. This means individuals are free to choose their livelihood, but this right is not absolute and can be subject to "reasonable restrictions" imposed by the government under Article 19(6) for reasons like public order, morality, and the security of the state.

Key aspects of Article 19(1)(g)

- Broad scope: The right is very broad, covering any source of income, and allows citizens to engage in any type of business or profession.
- Not absolute: The right can be restricted by the state for the general public's interest, such as requiring specific technical qualifications to practice a profession (e.g., an engineering degree for an engineer).
- Restrictions: The government can impose reasonable restrictions to protect the sovereignty and integrity of India, public order, morality, and security.
- Examples: The right can be restricted for activities that are unethical or dangerous, like trafficking in harmful drugs, and can also be regulated through licensing, such as for online gambling.
- State's role: It also allows the state to carry on a business or trade, such as running Indian Railways or ISRO, without excluding citizens from that field.

How to interpret Article 19(1)(g)

- Start with the right: Begin by recognizing the fundamental right to choose a profession, trade, or occupation.
- Consider the restrictions: Immediately follow this by considering the "reasonable restrictions" that the state can impose on this right, as outlined in Article 19(6).

FREEDOM TO MOVE FREELY THROUGHOUT THE TERRITORY OF INDIA

Article 19(1)(d) guarantees to all citizens of India the right "to move freely throughout the territory of India." This right is however, subject to reasonable restrictions mentioned in clause (5) of Article 19, i.e. in the interest of general public or for the protection of the interest of any Scheduled Tribe.

Article 19(1)(d) of the Constitution guarantees to its citizens a right to go wherever they like in Indian territory without any kind of restriction whatsoever. They can move not merely from one State to another but from one place another within the same State. This freedom cannot be curtailed by any law except within the limits prescribed under Article 19(5). What the Constitution lays stress upon is that the entire territory is one unit so far the citizens are concerned. Thus the object was to make Indian citizens national minded and not to be petty and parochial.

Grounds of Restrictions – The State may under clause (5) of Article 19 impose reasonable restriction on the freedom of movement on two grounds-

- a) In the interests of general public
- b) For the protection of the interest of Scheduled Tribes.

FREEDOM TO RESIDE AND SETTLE IN ANY PART OF THE TERRITORY OF INDIA

According to Article 19(1)(e) every citizen of India has the right "to reside and settle in any part of the territory of India." However, under clause (5) of Article 19 reasonable restriction may be imposed on this right by law in the interest of the general public or for the protection of the interest of any Scheduled Tribe. The object of the clause is to remove internal barriers within India or any of its parts. The words "the territory of India" as used in this Article indicate freedom to reside anywhere and in any part of the State of India.

It is to be noted that the right to reside and right to move freely throughout the country are complementary and often go together. Therefore most of the cases considered under Article 19(1)(d) are relevant to Article 19(1)(e) also. This right is subject to reasonable restrictions imposed by law in "the interest of general public or for the protection of the interests of any Scheduled Tribes. Thus where a prostitute, under the Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act, 1956, was ordered to remove herself from the limits of a busy city or the restriction was placed on her movement and residence, it was held to be a reasonable restriction.

FREEDOM TO PRACTISE ANY PROFESSION, OR TO CARRY ON ANY OCCUPATION, TRADE OR BUSINESS

Article 19 (1) (g) of Constitution of India provides Right to practice any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business to all citizens subject to Art.19 (6) which enumerates the nature of restriction that can be imposed by the state upon the above right of the citizens. Sub clause (g) of Article 19 (1) confers a general and vast right available to all persons to do any particular type of business of their choice. But this does not confer the right to do anything consider illegal in eyes of law or to hold a particular job or to occupy a particular post of the choice of any particular person. Further Art 19(1) (g) does not mean that conditions be created by the state or any statutory body to make any trade lucrative or to procure customers to the business/businessman. Moreover a citizen whose occupation of a place is unlawful cannot claim fundamental right to carry on business in such place since the fundamental rights cannot be availed in the justification of an unlawful act or in preventing a statutory authority from lawfully discharging its statutory functions.

Keeping in view of controlled and planned economy the Supreme Court in a series of cases upheld the socially controlled legislation in the light of directive principles and the activities of the private enterprises have been restricted to a great extent. However under Article 19(6), the state is not prevented from making a law imposing reasonable restrictions on the exercise of the fundamental right in the interest of the general public. A law relating to professional or technical qualifications is necessary for practicing a profession. A law laying down professional qualification will be protected under Article 19(6).

Under article 19(6)(ii) nothing contained in Sub-clause(g) of Clause (1) of Article 19 shall affect carrying on by the State any trade, business, industry or service, whether to the exclusion, complete or partial of citizens or otherwise if it is not in the interest of general public. Article 19 (6)(ii) will have no application if the State is not carrying on any trade.
