

TRAVEL PROTECTION

FOR CLIMBERS AND TREKKERS

Global Rescue is the leading provider of advisory, rescue and evacuation services to climbers and trekkers worldwide. From Everest to Aconcagua, Global Rescue has a long history of successful mountain, wilderness and backcountry rescues. The company's ability to perform a field rescue — no matter how remote — and evacuate a member to safety is unmatched.

Traveling above 15,000 feet? Add the High-Altitude Evacuation Package. Our High-Altitude Evacuation Package provides services to members age 16 years and older who travel above 15,000 feet (4,600 m) during any part of their trip (excluding air travel) and who require emergency transport due to injury or illness.

INDUSTRY LEADERS

Global Rescue leads the industry as the only organization with deployed personnel and operating capability in key locations, including the Himalaya, Karakorum and Andes regions. As an enhancement to that leadership, our Mountain Advisory Council helps us stay continuously attuned to always-evolving situations in the mountaineering world so we can keep our services top-notch when it comes to meeting the mountain community's needs. This includes active guidance from Mountain Advisory Council members Ed Viesturs, mountaineering legend and Jed Williamson, outdoor adventure safety expert and longtime mountaineering author.

If you're a person who's active, who's outdoors, who travels, it's crazy to not have Global Rescue. The membership is so valuable compared to the potential expenses. My rescue on Mount Everest in 2016 would have cost me about $20,000, compared to the few hundred dollars I paid for the membership.

— Robert Kay, climber and adventurer from Lincoln Nebraska

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q. Does Global Rescue place any restrictions on elevation?

A. If you're adventuring to higher altitudes, our High-Altitude Evacuation Package provides services to members age 16 years and older who travel above 15,000 feet (4,600 m) during any part of their trip (excluding air travel) and who require emergency transport due to injury or illness. Keep in mind higher elevations may hinder the ability of aircraft to reach a member in need.

Q. Am I eligible to receive Global Rescue services wherever I am in the world?

A. There are two restrictions: state department-defined war zones and a polar restriction. If you are above the 80th Parallel North or below the 60th Parallel South, Global Rescue offers field rescue and evacuation on a fee-for-service basis.

Q. Why is the High-Altitude Evacuation Package limited to those 16 years of age and older?

A: Global Rescue's medical experts, renowned in high-altitude medicine, have thoroughly researched the issue. Based on the available literature, it's deemed medically inappropriate for individuals under 16 to travel to such high elevations. To discourage unhealthy practices for those under this age, our High-Altitude Evacuation Package is restricted to those 16 years and older.

Q. What happens if I have altitude sickness?

A. Any member suffering symptoms of Acute Mountain Sickness should not ascend any higher, should descend, and contact Global Rescue as soon as possible. Global Rescue's medical teams are trained to assess members with symptoms of Acute Mountain Sickness and are supported by Global Rescue's staff physicians, including a leading authority on altitude-related issues. Many times, cases requiring in-patient hospitalization may need evacuation or transport services. Global Rescue has performed thousands of rescue and evacuation missions in the Himalayas, including dozens on Everest.

Q. If I need to be rescued, should I arrange my own evacuation?

A. No. Please call Global Rescue at the time of an incident and we will provide the necessary services from start to finish. (If you are incapacitated, you can have a member of your team contact us.) When Global Rescue organizes and/or performs the rescue and the MSA criteria are met, there is no cost to the member up to $500,000. If you arrange for your own rescue, we are unable to reimburse members.
