

July 28 Acknowledgement Day

Congratulations to The Judahite! What a surprising day of acknowledgment!

Thinking back ten years ago, the Elohim placed The Judahite in his current location for a task mission.

The Judahite's automobile timely broke down in a pass-through state on the way to find work in the Northwest. With limited financial resources, the repairs were required despite auto repair shops being known as rip-offs.

While waiting several days for auto repairs, The Judahite got a lead on where to find work. After a few days, consciousness emerged, confirming the right place and the correct hour. He moved with the circumstances to different locations over the years. As a practicing principle, The Judahite adjusted to environmental conditions without resistance, knowing that the conditions are transitory—not permanent. Even so, The Judahite always prayed to be equipped with an alert spirit for not missing what needed to be captured to augment knowledge in task performance.

Many eventful moments can be related but unnecessary as they are compositional to birthing the task's assignment outcomes. However, citing a few would be for an impressionable overview.

- The Judahite got rear-ended and when to the hospital.
- A bridge collapsed, falling on The Judahite's leg.
- Again, The Judahite got rear-ended at high speeds on the highway.

As consciousness unfolded over the years, The Judahite knew his task mission aligned with prophecies. Being in the right location at the correct time was scripted by Enoch. Consider, therefore, The Judahite's task mission is supported by a prophetic infrastructure, removing the notion of spontaneous inspirational moments. For example, The Judahite awoke from a twenty-minute nap and found his carpet rug soaked supernaturally with water, taking over five days for the rug to dry out through direct sunlight.

As a snapshot in review, the Judahite's automobile failed to operate, assigning him m to the current state independent of personal plans. A decade later, the task mission is being wrapped up, and it's time to move on. A big congratulation is in order.

Yes, the host of heaven certified July 28 as wrapping up acknowledgment day for The Judahite, who saw the certification process on July 28.

The Judahite is indeed appreciative. July 28 will become a standardized date for all outstanding persons called upon by the spirit for a task mission and completing it.

The honorees will receive rings and honorary certificates.