

Completing the Prophetic month of March: The Feast of Leavened Bread

As an institutionalized date, the Feast of Leavened Bread complements the New Covenant.
A promise made; a promise honored.

The Judahite's choice of cornbread, made from self-rising meal, starkly contrasts with the unleavened bread traditionally eaten at Gilgal. This culinary diversity is prophetic, from spiritual immaturity to maturity, from regional governance to global. Furthermore, The Judahite's preparation garlic bread symbolizes the courage to return to the spoked horse, throwing the mobilization rider off, a striking example of adaptability.

Despite the Edict not being issued on March 29, the Judahite and the Executive Body of Israel in Exile have shown remarkable flexibility by turning to other strategic planning options to subdue all the countries in the Middle East.

The heavenly court ruling is final, leaving only one pathway to guide the Transitional Movement of Relocation, the aid of the Black Horse, but not exclusively.

Prepare to engage by sharpening your employment and business skills.

Prepare an affidavit for all movables.

Look around in your local city and town. Select the businesses you wish to engage in or be part of. Do a general description of all the movables at the locations. No! Do not go to the property. If you know what the businesses do that would suffice for a general ideal for wanting to take the movables.

The affidavit is for personal use. For example, if other Israelites have a claim on the same movables, the affidavit will aid your claim. For years, members of Judah have been asserting claims on the movables of Fortune 500 companies.

When the time comes, the movables will be taken and carted to be shipped by airplanes and ships. Israel's Commonwealth of Labor will not need many movables in the capitalistic economy. Still, it is better to claim than not to.

As the planning process develops, there will be unlimited working connections to plug into.

Don't worry; by the time the signal is given to start crating your moveable, there will be no national government as known today, and those living there will have no use for the movable. No significant degree of commerce will ever be resuscitated; what a wasteland!
