

2006 West Coast Swing

This year the shoe is on the other hand

From: Caliento, Jason

Sent: Sat Mar 04 11:22:40 2006

Subject: RE: Golf Handicap?

Net scores in the 88-94 range. One 96 at Thanksgiving at Blackhorse (4 eights in that round capped at 7). 11 rounds make up my score, that's every round I've played since last year's WCS.

I always appreciate the annual attempt to make me better at golf than I am. I have a 17.3 handicap based on the last 11 rounds I have played, which dates back to May of last year. My scores are kept on mybogey.com. I'll accept that we need to make "even" teams, but I'm not going to accept that I now play to an average score of about 83-84 when I've never broken 85 from the blues in my golf career.

I do like your logic that my opportunity to play and the fact that I won last year gives me a lower handicap. Perhaps the number of beers consumed in a round can help with the analysis as well...

In all seriousness though, there's no way I'm an 11, there's no way I'm a 14.

Here is what Caliento had to say going into the 2005 West Coast Swing:

From: Caliento, Jason
[mailto:Jason.Caliento@crowncastle.com]

Sent: Tuesday, April 19, 2005 7:53 AM

Subject: RE: West Coast Swing - Austin Style
I did beat Dug by 7 strokes on his own course last fall...which apparently would make me a about an 11.... But I haven't broken 90 since those fed up lessons last year. I believe I play to a 20.

Here is what it did to us
...and to Rod

