Commanders Report

Greetings fellow compatriots. We will have our monthly meeting at Chill in Grapevine on the 19th start with out "Eat and Greet" at 6:00 P.M. Our scheduled speaker is Bruce Cunningham. You may remember his last presentation on "Bloody Kansas". I'm sure Allen will have a slide show covering his last reenactment and get together. In this month's Gano Gazette there is an interesting article that will cover in two parts the life of Brigadier General Benjamin "Ben" McCulloch, a real Texas Hero. Be sure to mark your calendar for our first Confederate tombstone marker clean up to be held at Grapevine Cemetery. This will be a first for me and I'm looking forward to next Saturday.

Don't forget the Division Reunion coming up in McKinney the first of June. Registration is open, and you can find information at our Division Web Page. Hope to see ya'll at Chill's Cotton Belt Room this Tuesday.

Deo Vindice,

"It is finished"; and He bowed His head and gave up His spirit" (John 19:30). The agony was now over for Jesus. He no longer felt the agony of crucifixion nor heard the taunts and insults of a blood-thirsty mob. The crown of thorns upon His brow and the nails that pierced His hands and feet no longer wracked His body.

He no longer felt the torture and emotional agony of separation from His heavenly Father. His heart ceased to beat. His breathing had ceased.

However, in the silence following Jesus's death, there were other sounds; sounds of bursting fetters, breaking chains, crumbling prison walls, the renting of veils, the overthrowing of barriers, and the opening of gates.

What was it that Jesus finished? Certainly, He was not referring to His own life as being over. Christ's last words of defeat, but the cry of victory, the shout of triumph, and the sounds of a trumpet in heaven,

"Finished" was the work of redemption, the last payment for the guilt of sinful human beings. Romans 3:23 says that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God". Romans 6:23 tells us that "the wage of sin is death." Thus Finished was the terrible ban of judgement upon the ages, the power of darkness and desolation, the curse of sin upon humanity.

Christ accomplished what no one else in history could have accomplished. He closed the humanly unbridgeable gulf between a holy God and a sinful mankind. This was the mission the Father had assigned Him, and it was now completed and behind Him. He had come into the world on the way to a Roman cross to bear on His own body the sins of the world.

Though the work of Christ's visible presence was completed, the work of His invisible presence through the indwelling of the Holy Spirit would continue through the followers He left behind. The tragedy that happened on the hill called Calvary on that dark Friday was totally transformed into triumph on history's first Easter morning.

The apostle Paul described the completed work of redemption in this way, "Being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself by becoming obedient to the point of death, even on a cross. For this reason also, God highly exalted Him, and bestowed on Him the name which is above every name, so that at the name of Jesus EVERY KNEE WILL BOW, of those who are in heaven and on the earth and under the earth, and that every tongue will confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Philippians 2:8-11).

After Christ's resurrection and Pentecost, the once defeated and dispirited disciples became totally committed to world conquest. These men-ordinary, fallible, sometimes fearful, blundering men-were changed from students in discipleship school into flaming evangelists, ready to go boldly into the very city that had crucified their leader to proclaim Him to be both Savior and Lord. Our world has never been the same since. Their faith was no longer a convenience, but a consuming passion. They boldly proclaimed, "He is alive; for He has risen" (Matthew 28:6). And indeed, He has done just that.

Christ's work is finished! Our work as followers of Jesus Christ has just begun!

Compatriots:

The 2022 Texas Division Reunion in McKinney TX. is fast approaching. We are honored to have Susan Lee as our guest speaker at the Saturday Evening Southern Ball.

Born and raised in a small suburb just east of Richmond, Susan grew up in the shadows of the Seven Days Battlefields, and as the daughter of a relic hunter and War Between the States enthusiast, was raised to honor and respect her Southern Heritage. She is the descendant of five Confederate Veterans, all of whom served from and for Virginia.

In the fall of 2011, she helped organize the Virginia Flaggery, who have gained national attention for their efforts in numerous heritage defense battles throughout Virginia, and beyond. Since September of 2012, the Va Flaggery have erected 34 Large Battle Flags along Interstates and roadways in Virginia, and currently have several additional flag sites under development.

She is the recipient of the Advancing the Colors award from the Lee-Jackson Camp #1, SCV, Richmond; the Ladies Appreciation Medal from the Robert E Lee Camp #1589, SCV, Midlothian; the Commander-in-Chief's Ladies Appreciation Medal, and received the Stephen Dill Lee Award at the 2013 SCV National Reunion in Vicksburg. She is a member of the Richmond-Stonewall Jackson #1705 Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, a member of the Dixie Rangers Chapter of the Virginia Society, Order of the Confederate Rose, and an associate member of the Edmund Ruffin Fire Eaters #3000 Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans.

VA Flagger Update

We are pleased to share these new photos of the new Farmville Rt. 460 High Bridge Memorial Battle Flag! This is our latest flag raised, and a great reminder to all who see her that we are STILL HERE... and still raising new monuments and memorials, in spite of the illegal and immoral desecration and destruction by the left over the past few years.

The response to the new flag has been OVERWHELMING, to say the least. As expected, liberals and local leaders are fuming and scrambling to figure out what they can do to get it taken down, and/or prevent any additional flags being raised in their county.

What has been unexpected is the AMAZING outpouring of support from local residents AND the number of people requesting to have a flag installed on their property. We are scrambling to contact them all, and find materials and funds for installations for those who sign leases.

It's looking like Farmville may very well be the next Danville!

Our landowner for this site is taking some heat. She owns and operates a business in the area and, as you can imagine, she and her business have been a target of the haters almost as soon as it was raised. We would ask that if you are so inclined, please contact the business and thank them for standing for our history and heritage. If you live in, or ever travel near the area, please stop in and give them your support and tell them why!

Benjamin "Ben" McCulloch A True Texas Hero

There are some men who work a lifetime for the betterment of state, and country without winning permanent recognition for their contributions to the history of the country. Such a man was Benjamin "Ben" McCulloch. He won temporary fame in the Mexican War, but after his death in the War for Southern Independence he was forgotten in the history books of Texas. Noted author, historian and professor Walter Prescott Webb said the following in his article "Exploits of Texas Rangers":

Crockett, who was in Texas but a few weeks and fought but twelve days, is known as one of the State's great heroic characters; McCulloch served Texas a quarter of a century, rendering a thousand time more service than did Crockett. The former fought one battle; the latter fought in three wars, to say nothing of Indian engagements by the score. Both died a sacrifice to the cause which the State espoused. Yet Crockett is known as one of Texas' greatest men while McCulloch is all but unknown. The comparison is not for the purpose of detracting from Crockett's fame, for it is immortal, but for the purpose of showing that something is due his friend.

Benjamin "Ben" McCulloch, Indian fighter, Texas Ranger, surveyor, State Representative, United States marshal, and Brigadier General in the Army of the Confederate States of America, was born in Rutherford County Tennessee, on November 11, 1811, the fourth son of Alexander and Frances F. (LeNoir) McCulloch. His mother was the daughter of a prominent Virginia planter, and his father, a graduate of Yale College, was a major on Brig. Gen. John Coffee's staff during Andrew Jackson's campaign against the Creeks in Alabama.

Like many frontier families on the Western frontier, the McCulloch's moved often from North Carolina to eastern Tennessee to Alabama and back to western Tennessee between 1812 and 1830. They settled at last near Dyersburg, Tennessee where David Crockett was among their closest neighbors and most influential friends. After five years of farming, hunting, and rafting, but no formal schooling, Ben then agreed to follow Crockett to Texas, planning to meet him in Nacogdoches on Christmas Day, 1835.

Ben McCulloch was twenty-five years of age when he came to Texas. He was about five feet and ten inches in height, and although he appeared to be slightly thin, the muscular arms and shoulders gave him the appearance of an athlete. His keen features and sharp blue eyes gave evidence of intent courage and intelligence. Ben had already developed an exceptional skill with the rifle, and his natural developed skills and instinct as a woodsman was well equipped for the work which was ahead of him in Texas.

Ben felt it his duty to stay at home until the work on the farm was such that he could leave on his planned trip to Texas. As a result of this delay, it was sometime later that he and his younger brother Henry were in a position to leave their home. The two brothers left their home well equipped for the journey to Texas, carrying with them an extra horse, rifles, side arms, knife, and extra clothing. Their journey took them across the Mississippi River at Memphis, down through Little Rock, Arkansas, south to the Red River and a few miles above Natchitoches, and over to Nacogdoches, where they arrived in the early part of January 1836. During their stay in Nacogdoches, Ben persuaded his younger brother to return home to aid his father for another two years. This may not have been the real reason for sending his brother back, but it served as the best argument because of the love the boys had for their parents. They sold their horses and set out on their separate ways with Ben headed for San Antonio. On reaching the Brazos River Ben became ill with an attack of measles and was delayed for several weeks while recovering.

During his illness, the siege of the Alamo took place, and his friend whom he was trying to join, fell with the small, gallant band in the defense of the small post. The disappointment which McCulloch must have felt in being delayed from joining Crockett, certainly saved for Texas a man who was to serve the Republic, and State for a quarter of a century with honor and glory.

Upon recovery from his illness, which saved him the fate of those at the Alamo, McCulloch went down the Brazos River to Groce's where he joined the army of General Sam Houston. General Houston had taken command at Gonzales and was in retreat with his army from the forces of Santa Anna, biding his time for the right opportunity to strike the enemy. McCulloch was a welcome addition to the army of Texas, as was any volunteer who joined it at this crucial period. He was placed in charge of one of the "Twin Sisters," when the two guns arrived in camp shortly before the army pulled away from the Brazos to rendezvous at San Jacinto. Early in the afternoon of April 20, the Mexican artillery fired a shot at the Texans, which was answered by shots from the "Twin Sisters." Ben McCulloch displayed such courage and ability in performing his duties as commander of the guns, in the battle the following afternoon, that he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant on April 22. In later years when General Houston was under attack for his conduct in the battle, Ben came to the aid of his former commander by writing the following account of the battle:

"At the battle of San Jacinto, I was in command of one piece of artillery. The fire from it opened upon the enemy about 200 yards distant. We advanced after each discharge, keeping in advance of the infantry, until we were within less than one hundred yards of their breastworks, at which time I had aimed the gun, but was delayed in firing for a moment by General Houston, who passed across, some thirty yards in front of the gun, and was at that time nearly that distance in advance of every man in that part of the field. After this, I saw him advancing upon the enemy, at least one-third of the distance between the two armies, in front of Colonel Burleson's regiment, when it was not more than seventy or eighty yards from the enemy's breastworks. About this time, the enemy gave way, and the routs became general. By recollections of the Battle of San Jacinto.

Signed: February 22, 1858, Ben McCulloch

The inactivity which followed the Battle of San Jacinto caused McCulloch to request a furlough to pursue a course only natural to a woodsman. Ben made an exploring trip alone into the Lavaca and Guadalupe River valleys with the idea of learning more about the land which he had adopted as his own. After Ben's return to camp, he requested a furlough to return to Tennessee to raise a company of volunteers. This he did with little effort, returning to Texas with a company of thirty in the fall of 1836. True to his nature, McCulloch declined the captaincy of the company, suggesting, in his stead, Robert Crockett, the son of Colonel David Crockett. Ben and his younger brother Henry set up residence in a cabin about two miles from Gonzales until 1840, when Henry married.

The laws of the Texas Republic required that all official surveys be made by the appointed county surveyors and their deputies. There are no records available showing that Ben was made a deputy surveyor for Gonzales County. Private persons must have engaged him to make a preliminary survey of their lands. When Austin was chosen as the permanent seat of the Texas Republic in 1839, the people of Gonzales were anxious to have a road to the new capital. They chose Ben McCulloch to mark off a road from Gonzales to Austin. Ben had not been over this course before, but he received all the information needed about the heading and country from General Edward Burleson. He then proceeded with the work which was accomplished successfully.

Ben McCulloch had been in Gonzales long enough to make many friends there and in the surrounding settlements. These friends persuaded him, against his own desires, to become a candidate for Congress from Gonzales County. McCulloch's opponent was Colonel Alonzo B. Sweitzer who made a strenuous campaign trying to force McCulloch to "take the stump." Ben preferred to run on his reputation and made little effort to obtain votes. Colonel Switzer, in an effort to arouse McCulloch, invited him to meet in a debate. Switzer, who was often intoxicated and insulting, caused Ben to decline the challenge in order to avoid personal difficulties. Sweitzer, by using his refusal to debate as a weapon, ridiculed the friends of McCulloch for supporting a moral coward. The insults gave Ben no heed and in September 1839, Ben was elected to Congress by a vote of 63 to 42. A third candidate received 17 votes.

Slandorous remarks continued to flow from Switzer against McCulloch. Ben challenged Sweitzer's charges asking Switzer to defend himself. This Switzer would not do, saying that he was not ready. Switzer sent a formal "note of challenge" to his friend Colonel Reuben Ross. Ross accepted the challenge. McCulloch and Ross met outside Gonzales with rifles, at forty paces. The shot from the rifle of Ross struck McCulloch on the upper part of his right arm, causing his aim to go wild. Ross, proving he was a gentleman offered the services of his doctor. They left the field friends.

On Christmas Day, 1839, Ben's younger brother Henry McCulloch killed Ross in a pistol duel in Gonzales.

Sons of Confederate Veterans
 "DEFENDING THEIR HONOR SINCE 1896"
 www.scv.org ★ 1-800-MySouth

What is the Sons of Confederate Veterans?
 The citizen-soldiers who fought for the Confederacy personified the best qualities of America. The preservation of liberty and freedom was the motivating factor in the South's decision to fight the Second American Revolution. The tenacity with which Confederate soldiers fought underscored their belief in the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. These attributes are the underpinning of our democratic society and represent the foundation on which this nation was built.

Today, the Sons of Confederate Veterans is preserving the history and legacy of these heroes, so future generations can understand the motives that animated the Southern Cause.

The SCV is the direct heir of the United Confederate Veterans, and the oldest hereditary organization for male descendants of Confederate soldiers. Organized at Richmond, Virginia in 1896, the SCV continues to serve as a historical, patriotic, and non-political organization dedicated to ensuring that a true history of the 1861-1865 period is preserved.

CHARGE TO THE SONS OF CONFEDERATE VETERANS

"To you, Sons of Confederate Veterans, we will commit the vindication of the cause for which we fought. To your strength will be given the defense of the Confederate soldier's good name, the guardianship of his history, the emulation of his virtues, the perpetuation of those principles which he loved and which you love also, and those ideals which made him glorious and which you also cherish."

Lt. General Stephen Dill Lee Commander-General United Confederate Veterans New Orleans, Louisiana 1906

Remember, it is our duty to see that the true history of the South is preserved and presented to future generations.

Until we meet again, let us remember our obligations to our forefathers, who gave us the undeniable birthright of our Southern Heritage and the vision, desire and courage to see it perpetuated.
