Did you know...

Only 32% of Americans have a will, while 60% reported not making any effort to have a living will or create any estate planning documents? Estate planning is the organization of your personal and financial affairs to deal with the possibility of mental incapacity or death, which in turn protects your beneficiaries, including minor children.

According to an article in Legal Zoom, only 29% of Black Americans have wills due to wealth gaps, wage inequalities and lack of access to financial literacy education. So, why is it important to have estate planning? Not only does estate planning protect your beneficiaries and assets, but it can also provide tax relief and minimize family disputes.
