“As a small business owner and stalwart supporter of LSU, I have seen firsthand how the failure of our legislators to have honest conversations and make the tough decisions has hampered Louisiana's potential. As a Louisiana resident for over 30 years, I have worked tirelessly on the front lines of our state's largest institutions to make a difference in workforce and economic development and to provide access and resources to our most vulnerable citizens. I have watched frustrated and angry on the sidelines as our leaders have done very little to enact real systemic change. We need thoughtful, courageous leadership in our leaders. With collaboration comes progress, which is why I am running for the Louisiana State Senate - District 16. This means prioritizing education from cradle to university to educate and train our citizens. This means offering Louisiana citizens a stable tax code and economic incentives that grow our economy and support Louisiana's businesses and workers. Our education system must provide workforce training to ensure our citizens have the skills to secure and perform high-paying jobs. This means a fair and reasonable budget that promotes economic growth in Louisiana.
