BEING AN MVP REQUIRES FOCUS AND DETERMINATION

The California Army National Guard is made up of all-stars who lead their team to victory. They don't give up and let the clock run out. They sack any obstacle that stands in their way, and do whatever it takes to achieve success.

Pursuing Victory With Honorsm

The CIF was formed during the 1914-15 school year with 65,000 high school students in California and less than 8,000 students participating on their high school teams. Today, there are over 1.8 million high school students with more than 838,000 participating for their school teams including an all-time high of more than 354,000 girls. Education-based athletics will continue to thrive because of the life lessons it imparts on our young people.

Several years ago, the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS) launched the #MyReasonWhy campaign. The intent behind it was to demonstrate why we (student-athletes, coaches, administrators, parents and fans) are all involved in high school sports. Recently, the CIF resurrected this campaign to once again demonstrate the real reasons why education-based athletics is so impactful on our lives. Our 10 Section Offices communicated with our member schools asking them to have their student-athletes, coaches and administrators post on various social media platforms #MyReasonWhy. We encourage you to watch/read some of these and to post your own. Whether you are a student-athlete, or coach, parent or administrator, official or fan, we all have our reason why.

It is no secret that our student-athletes are inherently drawn to sport because it is fun and because of the connection it develops between them and their peers, coaches and school community. It is human nature to want to feel part of something bigger than yourself and to find a place where you belong. Do our young people also want to compete and win? Absolutely and that will always be a part of sport. However, the adults have to start asking the question, how far do we go to win a game? Do we sacrifice life lessons such as accountability, respect, fairness and loyalty? In looking at the current landscape of high school sports, some would say that we have already gone down this path. I disagree and the examples of the #MyReasonWhy responses that we have seen to this point and hopefully continue to see certainly demonstrate that the majority of those in our 1,609 school communities are involved for the right reasons. We need to put these examples forward of what it means to be part of the high school sports community in California.

Indeed, we occasionally see acts of poor sportsmanship and behavior by a player or a coach, but the overwhelming majority of school contests reflect the positive elements of Pursuing Victory with Honorsm. True, the goal is always to win the contest, but education-based athletics, when done correctly, places the value of life lessons, character and sportsmanship ahead of winning. It is this ability of education-based sports leaders to keep athletics in its proper perspective that helps separate us from the rest.

It is vital that as parents, fans and education-based sports leaders that we remember that less than 2% of our participating students will go on and compete in college athletics. Students participate in sports because it's fun. The athletic fields, gymnasiums and classrooms our schools provide allows adults the opportunity to teach valuable lessons that might not be learned in any other environment.

Creating life-long skills and helping create better citizens through participation in education-based athletics is the greatest gift we can give to the future.

Ten years from now, many of our student-athletes will return to their high school campuses for their class reunions. The majority of them will not talk about the championships that they won or their individual accolades but the journey they went on with their teammates, coaches and school communities. They will share stories and memories of their high school experiences. – the bus rides and comradery. We, as the adults, have the power to influence these future stories. We can transform the lives of young people so that one day they show up to their reunion to relive these stories with teammates and coaches. They return as the adults ready to show the next generation the true meaning of high school sports – the lifelong friends and the connections created with an entire community of support.
