JUSTICE FOR CAPTIVES ESCORTED OUT OF VILLAGE ROADSHOW LTD. HEADQUARTERS

THE ACTION:

TODAY at 9:30am, 14 Justice for Captives activists stormed the Village Roadshow head office to demand a 5 minute conversation with corporate executives and shareholders. The executives refused to disclose their identities, nor acknowledge or speak with the activists, who came to propose a more ethical and moral business model that did not involve using performing animals for profit.

Chelsea Hannah, an activist speaking on behalf of Justice for Captives states: "We [Justice for Captives] sat down in the boardroom and refused to leave until Village Roadshow management would speak with us. We wanted to negotiate a 5-10 year retirement plan for all performing dolphins in Australia, and hoped Shareholders would consider investing in a Sea Pen for the captive-born dolphins to retire in. Yet, we were treated like flies on the wall and ignored entirely until escorted out by police"

This action launched a new campaign against Village Roadshow and it's cinema brand. A short film trailer has been released.

Justice for Captives will continue to invite Village Roadshow Ltd. to demonstrate a moral responsibility and start retiring all of their performing dolphins as a first step to abolishing the animal-entertainment industry in Australia.
