

The Little Engine That Couldn't

Wolf
Block
Boox®
Proudly
Presents

Original Cartoon by Kim Greene

Book Written by Luke Diamond and Rough Draft By Sue Greene

There once was a little lazy, tired blue engine with a red stripe. She had a big job to get done, delivering candy and toys to the good and bad boys and girls on the other side of the mountain. She didn't feel like doing anything but resting. When she looked at the huge hill on the track in front of her, she decided to stop right there and try to climb that hill tomorrow. First the Chz Rail train came along and the lazy train asked for help but the Chz Rail train said "No, I have to run train number 10 to Yellow Cheddar because train number 10 broke down." and he sped off at 500 mph so the lazy train just sat there.

Next a Sueish Rail train came along and once again, she asked for a push over the mountain but the Sueish Rail train responded

"Sorry I'm running late on my schedule, so the little tired train just went back to sleep. Finally, a Kimmer Rail train came chugging along at 30 mph and asked the little train "Why aren't you moving?"

The little blue train with a red stripe answered "I'm just tired and don't feel like going up that big hill even though those good and bad boys and girls are waiting." The Kimmer Rail train agreed and they both said that they would try again tomorrow and they both fell asleep.

THE

END