"This is OUR Battle too."

On this day in 1941, the Canadian Women's Army Corps (CWAC) was established due to increasing wartime demands on our military and pressure from women eager to serve in uniform.

These women had a full range of responsibilities and tasks, including administrative work and jobs that were traditionally male-dominated.

The CWAC served alongside other Canadian women's branches during the Second World War, helping pave the way for equality in leadership and combat roles in our country's military. 🇨🇦

Two fish in a tank, one looks at the other and says, "How do you drive this thing?"

Evening news is where they begin with "Good evening," and then proceed to tell you why it isn't.

I know they say that money talks, but all mine says is "Goodbye."
