Social Studies Department

- 9th Graders are learning about the Neolithic Revolution. Next week we will be covering document-based questions and document-based essays.
- Tenth graders in Mr. Westhoff and Mr. Castillo's Global History & Geography course are learning about how centralized governance and absolutism began to categorize the Ottoman Empire, France, and Japan during the 18th century. Supplemental scholarly readings and homework assignments are provided on Google Classroom to reinforce this material.
- Twelfth graders in Mr. Westhoff and Mr. Castillo's Participation in Government course are exploring the American presidency through the context of constitutional origins, governmental function, and current events. In this vein, students are encouraged to follow current political trends in the news. An in-depth homework assignment on Google Classroom requires students to discuss how the tragedy of 9-11 has transformed the American presidency.
- In the twelfth grade Economic class, students will be learning about the VIPs of Hispanic Heritage month. Students will be creating slideshow presentations to highlight the VIPs such as Rita Moreno.

Film Department

- Students are currently learning how to analyze films by examining character development, themes, visual storytelling, and screenplay structure while also writing their own original scripts. Through scriptwriting activities, students develop creativity, brainstorming techniques, and storytelling skills by creating characters, conflicts, and dialogue.
- As a family activity, watch a movie together and discuss how the characters, setting, and visual choices help tell the story. Encourage creativity by asking "What if?" questions that can spark new story ideas. Our goal is to help students become thoughtful analysts, imaginative writers, and confident creative thinkers.
