The Birth of our Hybrid Voting Systems: STAR Vote (Austin, TX)

By relaying the following information, I am not saying that this technology didn't originate in Venezuela, or another globalist hub, but that is an aspect I cannot prove. I am saying that in 2011, in Travis County, TX (Austin), the County Clerk, Dana DeBeauvoir, convened a panel of technology "experts" from Microsoft, Belgium, and Rice and Berkeley Universities, as well as other employees of the County Clerk's office, and independent election "experts" as well, to build a new election system to meet what criteria she had then deemed appropriate. This system is nearly identical to the HART and ES&S voting systems currently used across the Great State of Texas. This system was dubbed "STAR Vote" and this title was an acronym describing the new build as a "Secure, Transparent, Auditable, Reliable" Voting system.

As a side note, there exists another voting system called "STAR Vote" which stands for "Score The Automatic Runoff" which describes a style of voting system very similar to RANKED CHOICE VOTING (RCV), out of Oregon. Their board has members from Austin, Texas as well, and the choice to name two seemingly unique voting systems with the same name, different acronyms, is concerning. The choice seems less of a coincidence and more of an effort to obfuscate the two systems so that critics lose track of which one is which.

The Austin, Texas STAR Vote technology was launched in 2013, as you will see in the video contained in the link below, as well as in the attached PDF.

DeBeauvoir teamed up with the likes of Dan Wallach and Philip Stark, who both helped in the design of these hybrid systems. These two men in particular have both written, and testified, in detail about the vulnerabilities in our electronic voting systems in the past, but have both abandoned their concerns since the outcome of the November 2020 election was announced. In short, they no longer believe so strongly that the machines could be hacked now that Biden has taken office. This is support for the theory that everything stated by men like Phillip B. Stark, Dan Wallach and Hari Hursti was meant to serve as a way to debunk an extremely likely Trump win in 2020 as a hack by Russia.

DeBeauvoir also brought in a non-American man named Olivier, from Belgium, to help design an American voting system.

The Travis County STAR Vote system seems to be what was sold to HART and ES&S, though I have not yet independently verified any transactions between these groups. In the video contained in the USENIX link provided below, Dan Wallach gives a presentation on their new creation, describing the basics on how the new system will work. Also in this video:

- Dan and crowd mock Election Integrity Activists (may have been a joke due to his then-stance on the hackability of machines, not so funny now that he has abandoned that position, which was likely his intent as soon as globalists had control of election systems).
- Dan bastardized Texas Election Laws as if they were funny to him.
- Dan mocks voters, stating that most of us wouldn't notice if their vote changed from their selection on BMDs (machines) to the PVR (ballots).
- Dan describes a method of tracking votes online.

Context matters, and we know that we must get back to a voting system we can trust. These men have done such a thorough job of casting doubt on the elections when we all believed Trump would win another term, but have gaslit the entire nation now that globalists have successfully installed their puppet in the Oval Office and more local offices to abuse our system more vigorously. These globalists mean to cast our nation into chaos, to breed distrust in one another and to cast our entire way of life into doubt and insecurity, whether true or not. Whether the machines are thoroughly breached or not, we must abandon their use in our elections in order to preserve our republican form of government and our American way of life. Our young nation cannot survive the rifts being torn between factions of patriots, we must be able to work together, and we must preserve liberty for our posterity. Please understand that the agenda was to cast doubt over every good thing, and to replace it with something worse that we also do not trust. This effort began to take off shortly after the Bush v Gore election issues and has been a growing effort since that time to create division within our ranks of dedicated patriots.

The only solution is to follow State Election Law, to return to in-precinct voting with paper poll books, paper ballots which are hand-marked and hand counted. Our elections should be simple enough to explain to our children how to cast a ballot.

This is all for the children. They deserve the truth, a unified front, and a chance at life, liberty and their own pursuit of happiness.
