

LONG VERSION:

Cait Murphy is a versatile singer-songwriter with a voice that carries the soulful depth of gospel, the raw emotion of blues, and the storytelling essence of folk. She began singing and playing guitar at nine, and by thirteen was performing original and gospel music at churches, events, and competitions throughout New England. After high school, she toured nationally with a vocal ensemble before stepping away from the stage to raise a family and pursue other passions.

Decades later, Cait returned to music by recording vocals on projects produced by her husband and musical partner, Chris Albertson. The two soon began performing together, first with their Joni Mitchell retrospective project and later performing standards and favorites as C2 Revue. Cait has recently come full circle, reconnecting with the singer-songwriter roots that feel most authentic to her, even as she and Chris continue to enjoy performing a variety of songs together.

They are now completing their first collaborative album, Walking Each Other Home. The title track marks Cait's return to her lyric-driven, singer-songwriter roots — a heartfelt new chapter created in partnership with her husband and musical collaborator, Chris.
