CODRINGTON COLLEGE (BUILT 1714 - 1743)

In the will of Christopher Codrington III, (died Good Friday, April 7th, 1710) he left the family plantations to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, for a college of medicine and divinity. A grammar school opened in 1745 and relocated to the Chaplain's Lodge on the upper estate to become the Lodge School, in 1829. The College opened in 1830, under the initiative of Bishop Coleridge.

It was devastated by the 1831 hurricane, rebuilt by 1833, gutted by fire in 1926, and restored by 1930. Further restoration was carried out in 1989 and is on-going. Legal control passed to a local Board of Trustees in 1983. The College, now an Anglican seminary, is an affiliated institution of the University of the West Indies.

On the occasion of his visit to Barbados this plaque was presented by President William Jefferson Clinton to
The Right Honorable Owen S. Arthur Prime Minister and to the People of Barbados in a spirit of friendship and goodwill which binds our two countries and in recognition that George Washington, the first President of the United States of America, lived in this house during his visit to this fair country in 1751.
