Some of us hurry out of the school and shout of freedom and some stay to get autographs of friends and teachers. Reactions to our last day at Rhodes are as varied as each individual. A great deal of the happiness these students now possess, they found at Rhodes, for it is a lively and friendly place. A Rhodian staying later after school would see quiet and deserted halls, but the next day they again would be filled with smiling faces and cheery voices.

A few seniors take a last look down the familiar corridors before going home and see what all the others will see tomorrow. They see cheerleader pom-poms and a victorious basketball team. They see a flash of blue and white on the football field and the sparkle of batons in the sunlight. They hear the charge on the trumpets and the cry of victory. They hear the slam of lockers and the crack of a starting gun. They hear the Rhodes choir and the Alma Mater. They cannot remember everything while they take that brief look. They see only that which is outstanding - spirit and friendship. The spirit was here when we came and will remain when we leave. The friendships - some brought with us and some formed here - will go with us from Rhodes. Next year when we return to see the teams for which our younger brothers and sisters cheer, we will see new faces but the same "Rhodes Spirit" will be there.

Our class leaves behind more than empty lockers, a forgotten tennis shoe, names on trophies, and initials on a desk. We leave a part of ourselves - a part we unselfishly give to J.F.R. And we take more than a diploma and a bit of knowledge. We take memories.

Ahead of us is a world we have viewed from the outside. We go into it with a curiosity and hope given us by the faculty and administration. To them, as to us, Rhodes is a place in a community where blue and white reign supreme. Tomorrow, when we drive to our jobs or colleges, we will pass Rhodes. It will be a building tall and stately. We were but a brief moment in its time as it was in ours - and when tomorrow is yesterday, it will still be a part of us as we are a part of it.

JANUARY, 1969

The Rhodes High School doors, through which you have been coming and going so many times, have seen many other classes come and go. However, the members of your class in your own way have demonstrated your strength, enthusiasm, talent, and perseverance. Our school is actually stronger because the January, 1969 class has been here.

Some persons may have empty lives because they do not care enough about life to pay the price for living it well. Observing you for three years and working with you makes me believe that you have been using your school lives as a bridge leading to future rich experiences.

Your dedicated and hard-working Aries staff has produced a yearbook which will always be a treasure. You will value it more and more as the years go by. It should be a reminder, too, for you to maintain your general interest in schools. No matter what changes may occur one may justifiably predict that any goal important to our community or country will depend, wholly or in part, upon some type of education.

Fine as it may be, this yearbook cannot record all the facts about your loyalty, service, industry, and character. Therefore, we wish to thank you for your friendly help during the last three years. Best wishes to each of you.
