

about georgiaxx

MORE

Los Angeles based songwriter Georgia Concilus has been writing music since the age of 14. Pittsburgh born songstress got her roots in classical training throughout her adolescence before moving to New York City to attend NYU and the New School in 2016 where she found herself drawn to the world of pop writing. Known for blending emotional vulnerability and unabashed confidence, a byproduct of her classical roots and contemporary pop prowess. Her sound, akin to a blend of Dua Lipa and a female Charlie Puth with undertones of Rihanna, reflects this unique journey. Since her 2019 debut, she has garnered attention from American Reporter, The New York Weekly, Music Observer, and more.

In July, she released her new single "panic attack," which premiered on KISS FM and received support from DJ Bonics, Lefuturewave, Roadie Music, among others. With a series of upcoming releases on the horizon, georgiaxx is asserting her presence in the pop world, following her previous singles "Yoga" and "Glitter." These singles are notable collaborations between georgiaxx and Grammy-nominated producer/songwriter Jesse Blum (Big Sean, Hit-Boy, Misterwives, and Mike Posner) as well as The Keynotes (TV campaigns for American Express, McDonald's, Honda, and Hyundai).

Statistics

100k + streams

10.6k followers

70k + views

90k + views

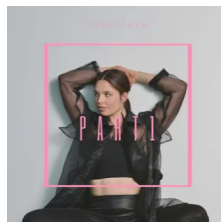

100k + Impressions

Music LISTEN

YOGA

PART 1 EP

DANG GOOD SATURDAY

PANIC ATTACK

Media

New York Weekly

MUSIC OBSERVER

THEAMERICANREPORTER