Spotlights

Urban Nerd Con: Covid basically killed the nerd convention scene in Montgomery, so we were beginning to despair if anyone else would try to take on the mantle. Unlike most cons this one focuses on creators of African descent. They have a great line up of panels and guests, as well as a lot of cool vendors on tap.

We Want To Hear From You: Our first big cause was the Busking Ordinance. And while we are still working on that, we are always looking out for other areas that we can help out. Is there some issue you would like to see us tackle? Nothing political, as we by law can't get involved in elections and such, but other than that, how can we help Montgomery become the best version of itself in your opinion? Shoot us a message and let us know! We're open to anything that doesn't cost much money...things like the Busking Ordinance (which cost us nothing but time pretty much).

Clearing Up Confusion: We get this a lot: "Oh man, we love what you've done with that space (referring to the Hilltop Public House)." We wish we were as driven and capable as those guys, but alas, we actually have nothing to do with Hilltop Public House, other than just being fans. Similar name, different entities, but both filled with a love of the Hilltop/Five Points area. Just wanted to clear that up.

Red Bluff Bar: They have officially opened, so go down to the Riverfront and check them out!
