Spotlights

Ashes and Ink: The premiere of the Nora's Playhouse performance Ashes and Ink starts this month at the Sanctuary. "A stirring story about grief, addiction, and a mother's love. Molly's son is a talented actor who is preparing for an audition to a prestigious drama school. He is also a recovering addict. Can he beat his addiction and get into drama school at the same time? And can Molly's relationships survive his anger?"

Hilltop Happenings: Construction work has started on the huge abandoned building. For the moment Montgomery Street has been closed, but you can easily detour around it.

Howlers at the Biscuits: Thursday September 8th the Biscuits have graciously said we can come set up as part of their Guardian Credit Union Community Corner. So we will be set up there, trying to make the most of Thirsty Thursday while meeting and greeting. We would especially love it if you stopped by our table to chat, maybe pitch your ideas on how we can work to make Montgomery better!

Sanctum: On the Friday the 16th there is a burlesque show happening at the Goat Haus Biergarten. Tickets are 30, but for 50 dollars it also includes a mini-boudoir shoot. From the event page: "In support of our local Pride organization, we invite you to join us for a night of erotic revelry as celebrated through the arts. Featuring visual and performance art that centers on erotica, kink, and all things sensual, this event aims to provide an inclusive space for exploring our desires free from judgment. Lingerie is encouraged but not required."
