SPOTLIGHTS

Art: The Art of Korey Rowswell

The fiber arts don't often get the love and respect they deserve. But just take a look at some of Korey Rowswell's work and you will see fabric transformed. From embroidery to soft sculpture, this multi-talented author does things with cloth you wouldn't ever dream of trying...and it turns out fantastic and fantastical. Their sculpture installations are amazingly eye-catching, so don't sleep on this artist.

Film: Montgomery Film Festival

Started in 2009 this has become the premiere film festival in central Alabama. While it initially only dealt with short films, it has now expanded to accept feature length productions. Going you will see a wide range of genres, including horror, animation, documentary, comedy, and action. This year's festival features 3 feature length, 6 narrative shorts, and 4 documentary shorts. It is hosted at the Capri Theatre in Cloverdale.

Music: Grasping at Pieces

At the Halloween Hootenanny a new band hit the Sanctuary stage for their first ever show. Grasping at Pieces may well also be the youngest band to ever have performed on that stage. Bringing some fast hitting, in-your-face punk this three piece impressed on their first showing, then promptly followed that by playing in Birmingham the next day with fellow locals One Like Son. Looking forward to seeing them more.
