Personal Essay

Since graduating high school my life has had many twists and turns. I studied for a year abroad in Germany at a private language school thereby earning credits through Eastern Washington University without ever having to set foot on their campus. I achieved a 1200 on my first SAT (out of 1600). Exactly 1200 or better was my goal. At 18 I was fluent in both German and English at the university level, having passed the Test of German as a Foreign Language. Also at that age I was accepted into Moravian College and Theological Seminary from where I suffered an Honorable Dismissal in my junior year. My academic record reflects apathy towards deadlines and sometimes even course material. I was the club liaison for Moravian's student judiciary and active in Moravian's pre-law club, German club and LGBTQ club, Spectrum. This was by day. By night I was deeply involved in illegal gambling and trafficking in controlled substances. This would ruin my life. I devolved into a worthless state of man. This confluence of circumstances over the 2008-2009 academic year led to a yearlong drunken stupor and on August 14, 2010 I was finally arrested and charged with DUI and related offenses. This would transform my life. As a direct and proximate result of my conviction I spent 35 months in prison sobering out. My brain had been continuously soused with inebriants for almost a decade prior to my forced sobriety. Because of the judge blessing me with incarceration I was ultimately able to go off all prescribed medication, remain free from intoxicants, and after about a year of white knuckle sobriety sit down with a psychiatrist and say 'this is what I'm experiencing. Can medicine help me?'. While in prison I spent countless hours utilizing the law library, reading two encyclopedias, and reading numerous works of both fiction and non-fiction for fun all the while balancing my need for exercise. Since my April 22, 2014 discharge from incarceration I have discovered what living in poverty means. Prior to August 14, 2010 I was living extravagantly and by robbery. This no more. Today, facing life on life's terms, and with poverty level income, I am indefatigable. I am committed to a new way of life, abstinence from all mind and mood altering drugs, and to completing my bachelor's degree.
