Introducing Sean Mills! @seanmillsartist

Sean is a visual creator, writer, and art advocate in Atlanta, Georgia. He blends media combining graphic design experience into traditional oil painting. He is locally known for painting on recycled materials, like pizza boxes. His work plays directly with the translation of images from online and digital formats into tableau paintings. The artist enjoys creating painterly yet sensitive portraits as well as pieces that satirizes contemporary popular culture.

"My work in oil paint is immediate formal study of the moment, including the media and presentation of how those images are currently shared. This is often a reflection of traditional portraiture and figures, however these are usually mediated by the internet. The curation and collection of images in social media is as interesting for me as the chosen subject. There is a form of ambush to the images I create because they often capture an obvious literal meaning, while also containing a conceptual element that may be invisible without context." - Sean Mills
